House Kills Reorganization Bill, 204-196

Floods Exile Thousands in South; Storm Death Toll 40

Many Persons Injured in Areas Devastated by High Winds.

Severe Blizzard Smites the West

Texas Railroads Tied Up; Snow Falls 3d Day in Chicago.

By the Associated Press.

Flood-burdened rivers drove thousands of Southerners from their homes yesterday while a blinding blizzard raked the western plains.

The Nation counted more than 40 dead in storm areas strafed by rain, snow, sleet and high winds.

The South bore the brunt of the elemental onslaught. A survey showed 13 persons had been killed by a tornado in Aliceville, Ala., and 13 others lost their lives when a mountain torrent gushed down Talona Creek and carried off a galvanized iron store building at Whitestone, Ga.

Troops Sent to Area.

Seven persons who apparently had sealed their house against one of the worst blizzards in the history of the Texas panhandle were found dead of asphyxiation near Pampa. The dead were one man, two women and four children. Snow was piled 5 feet high around their oilfield dwelling.

Even as these casualty lists were compiled, Alabam marshalled its forces to cope with a serious flood threat. Thousands fled from the endangered districts. Gov. Bibb Graves assigned National Guardsmen to aid the evacuation.

Prattville and Wetumpka, in the central sector of the State, were the focal points as record-breaking stages were forecast along the Alabama and Tombigbee rivers. Water stood 3 to 6 feet deep in Prattville. Boats brought out the refugees among the town's 2,500 inhabitants. Six Coast Guard boats were ordered to Selma.

The Wabash and White rivers approached flood stage in Indiana. Sleet and rain doused the State. The Mississippi lapped up to flood stage at Quincy, Ill. The St. Francis and Red Rivers swelled in Arkansas and Louisiana.

Rail Tieup In Texas.

Simultaneously, strong winds whisked heavy snow across Texas, central Oklahoma, eastern Kansas, western Missouri, northern Illinois and lower Michigan.

Southern Pacific officials at El Paso reported the "worst rail tieup in 20 years." Many motorists were stranded on highways buried under mounded snow on the Texas plains. A tractor rescue party broke through to reach seven school children who had sought shelter in a home.

Snow crushed the roof of a grocery in Alva, Okla. The snowy hillocks reached a depth of seven feet in Enid streets. A train was im-

'Attacking' Navy Rides Fierce Gale

Honolulu, April 8 (AP).—After weathering a gale which smashed motorboats, carried away lifeboats and twisted steel deck fittings, warships of the United States fleet entered Pearl Harbor today in a simulated attack on Oahu Island. Admiral Claude C. Bloch, commander in chief, said the attack disclosed certain unspecified deficiencies in Hawaiian defenses.

Roosevelt Shakes Up Navy High Command

CAPT. WOODSON. ADMIRAL ANDREWS.

Capt. Walter Woodson, naval aide to the President, has been named judge advocate general with the rank of rear admiral. Rear Admiral Adolphus Andrews, chief of the Bureau of Navigation, will become commander of the Scouting Force, with rank of vice admiral.

Capt. Woodson Named Judge Advocate General; Another Cruiser Squadron Created; New Vice Admiral; 20 Affected in All.

President Roosevelt yesterday approved a shake-up in the Navy high command affecting 20 ranking officers, naming a new vice admiral, creating another cruiser squadron, the eighth, and making his naval aide judge advocate general of the Navy. The orders take effect in June and July.

The orders advance Rear Admiral Adolphus Andrews, chief of the Bureau of Navigation, to vice admiral as commander of the scouting force, relieving Vice Admiral William T. Tarrant, who was named commandant of the First Naval District and Navy Yard, Boston, Mass.

Rear Admiral Forde A. Todd, former commandant of midshipmen, who is now under instruction at the Naval War College, Newport, R. I., will be in charge of the new cruiser division, while Capt. Walter B. Woodson, naval aide to the President, will relieve Rear Admiral Gil-

Chinese Claim Army at Gates Of Tsinanfu

Huge Shantung Victories, Taking of 5,000 Prisoners Reported.

By the United Press.

Shanghai (Thursday), April 9.—Chinese military authorities announced today, after recapture of Taierhchwang, that their forces had reached the suburbs of Tsinanfu, Shantung Province capital, and threatened to smash Japanese lines south of the Yellow River.

A spokesman said that other Chinese forces also were threatening the Japanese rear guard north of the Shantung capital, making it impossible for the Japanese to receive reinforcements.

The Chinese war office at Hankow claimed several other sweeping victories in southern Shantung Province, where the Japanese for weeks have been attempting to break through Chinese concrete fortifications and advance on the railway junction at Suchow.

It was announced that 5,000 Japanese infantrymen, captured at Taierhchwang, are being taken to Hankow.

SEC Forbids Utility to Pay Stock Dividend

Death-Sentence Act Is Used to Restrain Columbia Gas & Electric.

By the Associated Press.

The Securities and Exchange Commission last night invoked the drastic utility "death sentence" act to restrain the Columbia Gas & Electric Corporation from paying $6,152,141 in dividends on its common stock in 1938.

The corporation, a $700,000,000 registered holding company, operates in New York, Pennsylvania, Ohio, Virginia, West Virginia, Maryland, Indiana and Kentucky. It was incorporated in Delaware in 1926.

The commission, in making public its decision, said the corporation, in addition to seeking permission to pay the common stock dividend, asked approval of:

Proposed payment of dividends totaling $6,508,700 on the corporation's preferred and preference shares.

Suvich Hears Attack on Duce; Gov. Leche Averts 'Incident'

Comparing Mussolini to Roosevelt, Long, Softens Editor's Tirade.

An attack on fascism which might have come close to precipitating an international incident was made in the presence of the Italian Ambassador to the United States, Fulvio Suvich, at Baton Rouge, La., yesterday, the Associated Press reported, and was smoothed over only by immediate conciliatory action by Gov. Richard Leche.

The attack occurred at a luncheon following dedication of the University of Louisiana's newly completed agricultural center, at which Secretary of Agriculture Henry Wallace was chief speaker, with Ambassador Suvich as a special guest.

The ambassador sat quietly, the Associated Press said, as Walter M. Harrison, managing editor of the Oklahoma Times, denounced the form of government in his country. The report continued:

Harrison, former president of the American Society of Newspaper Editors, was scheduled to present

Wallace Reprimands Whispering Audience

Baton Rouge, La., April 8 (U.P.). Secretary of Agriculture Henry A. Wallace put a value on his words today when he reprimanded whispering students during dedication of Louisiana State University Agricultural Center. "I want quiet," said Wallace. "The Federal and State governments pay more for your education than you students pay in tuition and you owe it to your State and Government to listen to what I am saying."

Paris Fears Coups After Austria Vote

Daladier Strives to Set Up Cabinet Before Tomorrow.

Alliances Rushed; Blum Forced Out by Huge Senate Ballot.

By the Associated Press.

Paris, April 8.—Stocky, square-jawed Edouard Daladier undertook tonight quick formation of a national union cabinet to succeed the fallen government of Socialist Leon Blum.

President Albert Lebrun at a late hour invited him to attempt formation of France's 105th cabinet in the 67 years of the third republic and the Radical-Socialist accepted the charge.

The Senate forced Blum out on the twenty-sixth day of his second term as premier.

His old enemy, 75-year-old Joseph Caillaux, voiced the senate's scorn for the Socialist and his supporters outside Parliament.

Vote 223-49.

The upper house, by 223 votes to 49, refused to discuss in detail Blum's bill for drastic financial powers.

It did not even trouble to vote on the measure as a whole.

Daladier had ready made in his pocket a tentative cabinet list even before the Senate sealed the fate of Blum's government, the fourth people's front ministry.

The need for speed in forming a new government was stressed on all sides with Reichsfuehrer Hitler's plebiscite on Austro-German union scheduled for Sunday.

Nazi Expansion Feared.

Many Frenchmen feared that the plebiscite might be followed quickly by a new Nazi "expansion" in central Europe unless France had a strong government.

[Joseph Paul-Boncour, outgoing foreign minister, told Daladier that "France's interests demand that a government be formed before the German plebiscite on Sunday," the United Press reported.

[The French ambassadors and ministers to Warsaw, Bucharest, Belgrade, Moscow and Berlin are hurrying back to their posts after a conference in Paris, Paul-Boncour revealed, under orders to report immediately on the effects of the plebiscite.

Seek Strong Stand.

[The premier-designate was told that the "exact intentions" of Poland, Rumania, Yugoslavia and Russia must be obtained without delay in order that Germany may be told, after Sunday's plebiscite, that any attempts to repeat her Austrian coup in Czechoslovakia will run up against the resistance of the five powers.

[Meanwhile, reports reached Daladier of growing agitation for a general strike.

Rubinoff Emerges From Va. Wreck Clutching Violin

Hillsville, Va., April 8 (AP).—David Rubinoff, radio violinist, was involved in an automobile wreck today atop Fancy Gap Mountain, ten miles south of here.

With the violinist were his cousin, Albert Saroff, and his announcer, Jack Day.

The accident occurred during a misty rain, witnesses said, on a curve on which the driver had apparently applied his brakes, causing the machine to swerve to the rim of a gorge. There it was halted by the car's differential housing which hung on a rock.

The first person to arrive on the scene of the mishap said he found Rubinoff, clutching his violin, emerging from the car.

Fannie Brice Wins Suit as Rose Aids

New York, April 8 (U.P.).—Fannie Brice won a $34,000 suit today with the aid of Billy Rose, whom she plans to divorce. Rose testified for her in the suit brought by Edgar Allen, theatrical agent, who contended he booked Miss Brice into the Follies and never had been paid. The suit was dismissed.

Faith in President Is Made Issue But Plan Is Buried in Committee

White House Is Silent as Public Hails Victory 'for Constitution.'

New Deal Chiefs Visibly Dejected

Byrd Cheers Defeat of 'Terrific Pressure' on Congressmen.

House recommittal of the Administration's Government reorganization bill last night was received with wild jubilation by opponents of the measure and an almost unbroken silence from Administration leaders.

While an interested public kept newspaper phones jingling with excited queries, Senators, House members and private individuals who have battled the bill through tempestuous weeks at the Capitol announced their elation in a chorus of satisfaction.

The White House made no comment and those few Administration leaders who said anything expressed frank disappointment. But opponents, who fought the bill mainly on the issue of "legislative independence" called it a "great victory for the people" or a "victory for constitutional processes."

Byrd Hails Victory.

Senator Harry Flood Byrd (Democrat), of Virginia, hailed the outcome as "an amazing exhibition of the power of an aroused public sentiment versus the most terrific pressure on members of Congress from the Administration."

"As the one first to introduce the resolution for reorganization, I will continue my efforts to accomplish the results, preserving the authority of Congress and with economy and retrenchment as the main objectives," said Byrd.

The Virginian said "the issue was non-partisan, and Democratic votes accomplished the defeat."

"The grab for power," he said, "from the legislative to the executive branch and the frank admission that no economy was proposed were the two essential factors."

O'Connor Gratified.

Three Democratic leaders in the House fight to kill the bill—Chairman John J. O'Connor, of the House Rules Committee; Representative Samuel B. Pettengill, of Indiana, and Representative Arthur P. Lamneck, of Indiana—voiced immediate gratification.

"I consider the vote to be a tonic to present conditions in the country," said O'Connor. "I think it is especially beneficial to our party and to Democratic members of Congress."

Lamneck said only:

"The President of the United States said the Senate couldn't be 'purchased.' Now I want to say the House could not be purchased."

Pettengill commented that "with

Eden Will Return To British Cabinet, Halifax Intimates

Bristol, England, April 8 (U.P.).—Foreign Secretary Viscount Halifax intimated in a political speech here today that the way is being cleared for Capt. Anthony Eden to return to the cabinet from which he resigned in opposition to negotiations with Fascist Italy.

"I look forward to the time when the country will again enjoy the benefit of his service and guidance in its administration," said Lord Halifax, who replaced Eden as foreign secretary.

Eden's return, it was said, probably will be brought about during a general reorganization of the government after chancellor of the exchequer Sir John Simon's introduction of the new budget.

Police Will Rule Soviet Shipping

Moscow, April 8 (AP).—The secret police who built the 76-mile-long Moscow-Volga canal with convict labor today were placed in charge of all of Russia's shipping.

Nikolai Pakhomoff was ousted as commissar of water transportation Nikolai Ivanovich Yezhoff took over the commissariat, retaining his post as chief of the NKVD (secret political police).

The Reorganization Fight

President asked power in January last year to eliminate bureau overlappings, extend the merit system, revamp Federal accounting and Civil Service set-ups and establish two new departments. Senate and House established joint committee to consider program, but they split on procedure.

O'CONNOR. The victor.

Senator James F. Byrnes (Democrat), of South Carolina, brought a modified bill into the Senate last month.

Bill passed Senate, 49 to 42, on March 28, after bitter opposition fight and a landslide of telegrams opposing new powers for the President.

President in Warm Springs said that vote showed the Senate couldn't be "purchased" by telegrams.

House Reorganization Committee substituted new bill for Senate measure, and sought immediate action last week.

House Democratic-Republican coalition blocked prompt consideration after new deluge of opposition wires.

President at Warm Springs assured the country he had "no inclination" to be a dictator.

Thursday the bill escaped death in the House by 22 votes on a motion to "strike out the enacting clause."

Last night the bill was sent back to the Reorganization Committee by a vote of 204 to 196.

Leaders Appeal in Vain to Block 'Repudiation' of the New Deal.

Plea to Reconsider Also Voted Down

Roll Call—Page 14.

By Robert C. Albright.

The most dramatic legislative battle since the party-splitting court plan fight in the Senate ended last night with a House committee pigeonhole for the President's reorganization program.

The lethal blow was administered the merger measure by a close but decisive 204-to-196 recommittal vote by the House at 6:30 p. m.

It was the sharpest thrust of a long series of defeats dealt the Administration by House and Senate, rendered keener by the flat issue of "confidence in the President" injected by leaders in last-minute appeals to Democrats.

8-Vote Margin.

House burial of the measure by a bare eight-vote margin was on a Republican motion to recommit offered by Representative John Taber, of New York, ranking minority member of the House Reorganization Committee.

The stunning result was clinched by a motion to reconsider the fateful vote, which was promptly laid on the table by the thunder-throated assent of members.

Bedlam broke out in the House, which immediately adjourned. Opposition leaders clasped hands or embraced and the galleries stamped and shouted. Proponents of the bill sat silently, or quietly retired.

"Triumph" Hailed.

A landslide of press comment followed, in which opponents jubilantly hailed the outcome as a "triumph for legislative government" or "an amazing exhibition of the power of an aroused public sentiment." Leaders expressed keen disappointment.

Voting to sidetrack the bill were 108 Democrats, 88 Republicans, 6 Progressives and 2 Farmer-Laborites, while 191 Democrats, 2 Progressives and 3 Farmer-Laborites cast futile "no" votes.

Defeat came to the Administration despite sweeping "concessions" on key provisions of the bill and impassioned last minute appeals to Democratic members by Speaker William B. Bankhead and Majority Leader Sam Rayburn.

President Repudiated.

Both Bankhead and Rayburn made the issue squarely one of confidence in the President.

"A vote against this bill and a vote to recommit it would be a repudiation of this Administration and of the Democratic party," the Speaker adjured Democrats.

"Every newspaper in the country will report in headlines that the House of Representatives by Democratic votes has repudiated the President and has expressed the opinion that it cannot rely on him to carry out the negative provisions in this bill. But I have not lost confidence in the President."

Rayburn preceded Bankhead with the warning that "the message will be carried to the country that Democrats joining with Republicans voted lack of confidence in our President."

But the leader of the opposition, Chairman John J. O'Connor, had

People 'Scared' By New Deal, Hoover Asserts

Fear Prolongs Depression Already Over Abroad, He Declares.

By the Associated Press.

San Francisco, April 8.—Former President Hoover asserted tonight it was the American people, rather than business, who were "scared" at the economic trend, and suggested that New Deal "planned economy" itself was "making the one-third ill-fed and ill-clothed."

"It is nonsense to say that either big or little business is on strike," he said. "It is not so. Business is yearning to sell automobiles and new suits of clothes. It is the people who are scared.

"Big business or little business is not scared to take on men if anybody will give them an order for goods."

Mr. Hoover spoke before a group of citizens tendering him a "homecoming welcome" upon his return from Europe.

The former Chief Executive reiterated some of the views he expressed in his recent New York speech on the drift of Europe toward authoritarianism—a speech which started speculation as to his political intentions in 1940—but again he dropped no hint of his political plans.

Asserting American unemployment had increased "another million or two" during his two months in Europe, Hoover thrust repeatedly at "planned economy."

"I was at the very seat of fascism," he said, "when one of our important Government officials broadcast over Europe an attack upon fascism itself.

"It was received with great amusement. And I was compelled to listen to a relation of the uncanny parallel of steps taken in the United States under so-called planned economy with those which had bred the sort of chaos in Europe from which fascism sprang."

The former President apparently was referring to a speech broadcast to Europe by Secretary of the Interior Harold L. Ickes, who criticized dictatorships.

Senate Favors Pump-Priming, Survey Shows

Conservatives Capitulate in Advance to Plan for Vast Spending.

By Sidney Olson.

The remaining two of the Administration's three vast pump-priming programs—the three together designed to inject $4,500,000,000 into the thinning bloodstream of the Nation's commerce—will meet with little Senate opposition, a survey showed last night.

With the Glass bill sped to the White House yesterday, freeing $1,500,000,000 of Reconstruction Finance Corporation funds for loans to States, cities and industry, two sections of the dove-tailed depression-combating program remained on President Roosevelt's desk.

These were the work-relief appropriation, expected to total about $1,500,000,000, and a new public works program, adding up to another $1,500,000,000.

To these still unannounced programs, a number of conservative Senators yesterday virtually capitulated in advance.

Senator William E. Borah (Republican), of Idaho, said: "It makes one dizzy. But, of course, something must be done."

Evidences multiplied as to the extent of the three plans now be-

Britain Demands Oil Lands' Return

By the Associated Press.

Mexico City, April 8 (AP).—Britain today refused to follow the United States' "good neighbor" lead in recognizing Mexico's right to expropriate the $400,000,000 foreign oil industry.

In formal representations, the British government branded the expropriation as a "denial of justice," and demanded prompt return of British-owned properties

American-owned properties expropriated have been given an estimated value of $150,000,000, and those owned by British nationals $250,000,000.

Kisses Make Psychiatrist Burn When Part of 'Bedside Manner'

By the Associated Press.

New York, April 8.—The "bedside manner" of some doctors, which it was charged includes kissing, was condemned in a paper read to the American College of Physicians here today.

The speaker, Dr. James L. McCartney, psychiatrist of the New York State Vocational Institution at Catskill, said that suggestion is the oldest form of medical treatment.

"A physician," he said, "may not realize that when the patient comes to him for help he is willing to bare his very soul if necessary. Every word and action of the physician is seized upon, and without realization the patient developes a confidence that is akin to infatuation or love.

"The so-called 'bedside manner' of some physicians should be absolutely discontinued, such as putting an arm around the waist, patting the hand, or as I have observed, even kissing the patient or holding the hand during conversation."

Dr. McCartney discussed hypnotism. He warned that with sensitized persons hypnosis may occur spontaneously. Even radio waves, passing through their brains and bodies, he said, may cause "compulsion neuroses." These are feelings that something crazy simply has to be done right now.

"It is hazardous," he remarked in describing the onset of hypnosis, "to be alone with a woman, so a witness should be present."

Forget Defense Of Canal, Butler Urges in Senate

Ex-Marines Chief Assails Big Navy; Would Let Shipping Care for Self.

By the Associated Press.

Maj. Gen. Smedley D. Butler told the Senate Naval Committee yesterday the United States should abandon defense of the Panama Canal and let American shipping take care of itself on the high seas.

The retired marine commander argued that the canal could not really be protected because a "handful of bombs" could destroy it. He suggested that the nations of the world keep the canal open by some international understanding.

American shipping ought to fly a commercial flag, not the United States flag, he suggested. "If they'd insure these ships we wouldn't have to spend $60,000,000 a year to maintain a naval fleet in the Pacific."

Tired of "Guarding Oil Tins."

As for trade—"You don't have to sell goods with battleships," he declared, asserting that he had spent "15 years running around the world guarding Standard oil tins."

"If we just offer a cheaper price than our competitors, we'll get the trade," he added.

The $1,121,000,000 Naval expansion bill is a "grand international bluff," he said. It is intended, he argued, to give the administration a more potent diplomatic weapon, and the ships it provides for may never be built. He condemned "government by noise."

At any rate, he advised the committee not to favor a navy to "police the world." Because airplanes and submarines could "immobilize" any fleet, he advocated heavy investment in bombing planes.

Maverick Asks Guns.

Meanwhile, Charles Edison, Assistant Secretary of the Navy, calling at the White House with Admiral William D. Leahy, indicated the Navy intends to increase the tonnage of three battleships to be authorized under the expansion bill.

Taking advantage of the "escape" clause in the 1930 London Treaty, the Navy may exceed the previous 35,000-ton limit, Edison said.

Another development was a bill introduced in the House by Representative Maverick (Democrat), Texas, to appropriate $15,000,000 for military defenses on the Atlantic Coast and $42,000,000 for anti-aircraft guns.

Maverick said Boston, Narragansett Bay, Long Island Sound proper, New York City, Delaware Bay and Chesapeake Bay needed defenses.

"Defense Only" Backed.

Senate opponents of the administration's billion-dollar naval expansion bill indicated they would attempt to write into it a clause restricting the enlarged Navy to defense uses only.

"This bill ought to carry a statement of policy that the United States is not contemplating any aggressive warfare and that ours is strictly a purpose of national defense," said Senator Nye (Republican), of North Dakota.

Chairman Walsh (Democrat), of Massachusetts, predicted hearings would be concluded next week.

President Roosevelt said at his press conference today he had referred to the War and Navy departments for comment a proposal by Gov. Quinn, of Rhode Island, that an "American Singapore" naval base be established in Narragansett Bay.

Japan Sees War Gesture.

Kobe, Japan, April 8 (AP).—Admiral Mitsumasa Yonai, minister of the navy, today declared that the announced decision of the United States and Britain to abandon the 35,000-ton battleship limits of the 1936 London treaty "must be interpreted as evidence of their intention to oppose Japan."

He declared Japan was not building "bigger ships at present," but said the American and British programs might compel her to revamp her naval program.

Yonai assailed the American and British naval programs as indicating "a superiority complex," and said they are "bound to disturb the peace of the world."

"Japan may be forced to re-examine her own established replenishment program to ensure national defense and maintain peace and order in the Far East," he said.

British Movie Law Brings U.S. Protest

London, April 8 (AP).—The House of Commons was informed today that the United States had made "representations" over Britain's new motion picture films act as detrimental to the American movie industry. American producers contend the act imposes a heavy duty on their films while British movies have a free market in the United States.

President Qualifies as an Investment Counselor With His Warning to New Deal Speculators.

By Franklyn Waltman

A WORD of praise for President Roosevelt!

The President may lack the qualifications of a successful dictator, as he so modestly contended in his midnight letter from Warm Springs. But he certainly is qualified for the post of investment counselor. He has proved that.

WALTMAN

Indeed, it is ridiculous for Mr. Roosevelt to think of becoming a newspaper columnist or free-lance writer after 1940 when he is so eminently qualified to carry on an investment counseling service.

It will be recalled that the latter part of this month a year ago—many New Dealers well remember it—the President sent a letter to President Harry B. Mitchell of the Civil Service Commission, which, in effect, warned Federal officials and employes to get out of the stock market.

"I believe it to be sound public policy of the Government that no officer or employe shall participate directly or indirectly in any transaction concerning the purchase or sale of corporate stocks or bonds or commodities for speculative purposes, as distinguished from bonafide investment purposes," Mr. Roosevelt wrote.

"Engagements in such speculative activities by any officer or employe, whether under competitive civil service or not, should be among the matters considered by heads of departments and establishments and by the commission in passing upon questions concerning his qualifications for retention or advancement."

In passing the President's observations along to the executive departments and independent agencies, the Civil Service Commission did not forbid the Federal personnel from participating in stock market speculation. It passed along the advice for what it was worth—and it was mighty good advice.

But it appears that a number of New Dealers and other Federal employes did not think so—at least that is to be assumed from the presence of so many of them off and on during recent weeks in brokerage offices here.

The stock market reached its high point last year around March 10 and did some steady sliding through March and April. Thus when the President's advice became known, some believed that bottom had been approximately reached. Having ridden through what they thought was the storm, some New Dealers did not wish to retire when the market—as they thought—was about to bound upward.

But, alas, for many of them—for many persons outside of the Government unmoved by the President's advice—Mr. Roosevelt was right. With a canny insight for which we honor him—and if he desires he may use this as a testimonial—he foresaw that despite all his talk about stabilizing security prices and production and so on, the market in months to come would be confronted by the worst breaks and sharpest declines in its history.

Just to see how right Mr. Roosevelt was, let us take a look at security prices on the day he wrote his letter to Mr. Mitchell—April 22, 1937—and compare them with prices yesterday. The Dow-Jones averages constitute a good barometer for stock market trends. Here are the comparative figures:

	Apr. 22 1937	Apr. 8 1938
30 Industrials	181.70	109.57
20 Rails	60.95	21.71
20 Utilities	30.53	17.51

Not to be tiresome with figures but to see how badly hit were those New Dealers and others who failed to take the President's advice, let's compare the prices for certain active stocks, keeping in mind that yesterday was not the low mark of this year, as follows:

	Apr. 22 1937	Apr. 8 1938
American Can	101	81
Amer. Roll. Mills	37	16
Amer. Tel. & Tel.	168	127
Anaconda Copper	57	26
Chrysler	119	42
B. & O.	36	5
Bethlehem Steel	92	45
Gen. Elec	55	32
Gen. Motors	60	30
Montgomery Ward	59	29
N. Y. Central	50	12
Radio Corp.	10	5
So. Pacific	59	11
U. S. Rubber	64	25
U. S. Steel	114	43

Yes, Mr. Roosevelt gave the boys mighty good advice last April. It is too bad that all of them did not take it. But, what is more, Mr. Roosevelt carved for himself a niche in history beside that of Andrew Mellon, who warned of the coming 1929 depression when he said the time had arrived to "buy bonds."

People 'Scared' By New Deal, Hoover Asserts

Hoover

"that our economic system has been brought to this dangerous point where fascism is its destination. But . . . I do say that the direction we are going in today is precisely that which in the end creates the demoralization from which fascism invariably springs."

"Restore Jobs."

"And where have we arrived?" he asked. "At a discouraged and fearful people, with 12,000,000 unemployed. Is not the very system itself making the one-third ill-fed and ill-clothed?"

Mr. Hoover said America's first job was "to restore genuine self-respecting jobs in productive enterprises."

"The country," he said, "should sit down and think out every force, governmental, moral and economic, that is causing this fear, and uproot the cause.

"We should apply one test to the whole gamut of Government action. Does this action stifle initiative and enterprise? Does it cost men their jobs?"

Recovery in Europe.

Mr. Hoover said he had been interested in learning whether American "fears" came from abroad, "because the causes of fear which sucked us into the whirlpool of world-wide depression in 1931 came from Europe."

He stated there had been general recovery in Europe from that depression and that no "panic" was brewing to pull down the American credit structure "as in 1931."

"Their (Europe's) regained economic strength," he added, "is even helping us now by purchasing our goods, whereas in 1931 they stopped their purchases abruptly.

"In the (European) democracies there is no unemployment at all comparable to ours. They are indeed prosperous. France is of course having trouble because she adopted the new deal two years ago.

Plentiful Funds.

"Certainly, this great fear among the American people does not come from outside our borders.

"We will have to explore for the sources of fear at home.

"Today we have no inflated bubble of gambling credit or a weak banking system . . . as there was in 1929. The banks are full of surplus credit. There is no over-expansion in industry . . . In fact we are short of equipment. There is no consequential overstocking of goods. There is no over-expansion of buildings and homes. In fact there are not enough homes. There is no crop failure or threatened shortage of food or clothes.

Refers to Campaign.

"Every one of the factors and forces within our borders that ordinarily produce fear and its consequences in unemployment are absent."

Referring again to "12,000,000 people out of jobs" with their families suffering from "privation and worry," Mr. Hoover said:

"Some newspaper said the other day that I must get satisfaction out of this depression. I don't. I don't get satisfaction out of human misery.

"I do have a recollection of a bitter slogan used against us in the 1932 campaign. They said often and harshly that it could not be worse. But someone said that was about forty billion dollars ago. And we must live in the present."

greetings to the university from the press.

Speaker Assails Duce.

Referring to an interview with the ambassador published yesterday in a New Orleans newspaper, Harrison said it quoted Suvich as saying that Premier Mussolini does not make the laws of Italy but merely recommends them to the cabinet, which passes them.

"Well," Harrison said, "for 16 years Il Duce has operated as a supreme dictator with a cabinet of stooges and a puppet king."

Gov. Richard Leche, of Louisiana, presiding at the luncheon, said he could not let the remarks pass without comment.

"What Mr. Harrison has said about Mussolini doesn't hold a candle to what the newspapers of this country have said about the President of the United States," the Governor asserted.

Leche Saves Day.

"We, more than any other State in the Union, know something about dictatorships.

"If you have read the newspapers for the past few years, you have read that Louisiana had a dictator, that freedom of speech and of the press was suppressed under the administration of Huey P. Long. But it was under his administration that many of these buildings here were started and many other public works begun and we know that much of our program has been due to his efforts."

The ambassador asserted he had intended to reply to Harrison but the Governor's reply made it unnecessary.

In his address Wallace declared that the best protection of the United States against European dictatorships was a firm friendship with South America.

The Federal Government finally agreed yesterday to pay $5,201 to the State of Utah.

A check for the amount, mailed to Utah in 1917 in payment of the State's share of proceeds of some public land sales, was lost.

The Government refused to issue a new check unless the State gave an indemnity bond to protect the Federal Government against duplicate payment. This Utah would not do. Yesterday Comptroller General R. N. Elliott said the claim could be paid with a bond.

Senator McAdoo (Democrat), of California, announced he would be a candidate for another term.

In a statement addressed to "the people of California" McAdoo said:

"In order to put at rest all rumors to the contrary, I beg to say that I shall be a candidate for re-election as united States Senator in the August, 1938, Democratic primary.

"For the past five difficult years, I have striven unceasingly to serve your interests and the interests of the people of the United States. I shall appreciate the support of all good citizens who approve the record I have made and the course I have pursued."

Senator Harrison (Democrat), Mississippi, urged early action on amendments to the social security act by the House Ways and Means Committee.

The Senator, opposing legislation proposed by Senator Lodge (Republican), Massachusetts, to reduce payroll taxes, said committee hearings would afford full opportunity for investigation of all phases of the act.

Harrison objected to the Lodge proposal on the ground any revision of taxes should be preceded by full investigation with the aid of social security experts.

Mayors Ask President's Support for New Relief Funds

Harris & Ewing.

Mayors of six principal cities yesterday asked President Roosevelt to support a $3,000,000,000 appropriation to provide work for 3,500,000 persons in the next fiscal year. Shown at the White House, left to right (front row), are Mayor B. F. Dickman, St. Louis; R. L. Chancey, Tampa; Mayor Fiorello LaGuardia, New York; Mayor Maurice J. Tobin, Boston; Mayor Harold H. Burton, Cleveland; (back row) Mayor Joseph D. Scholtz, Louisville; Paul V. Betters, executive director, U. S. Conference of Mayors, and Mayor Daniel W. Hoan, Milwaukee.

fore the President. The main questions remained as "When?" and "How much?"

The first of the three to get under way completed an unprecedentedly speedy legislative trip yesterday when the Glass bill arrived at the White House after House approval.

The second, the work-relief program handled through the Works Progress Administration, will get under way within ten days, according to Harry L. Hopkins, WPA administrator, who told the Senate Unemployment Committee yesterday that the President will recommend a relief appropriation only for the first seven months of the next fiscal year. This sum, expected to total another $1,500,000,000, may range as high as $2,000,000,000, according to reports.

The third, still under White House consideration, embodies the recommendations of persons as various as Marriner S. Eccles, chairman of the Board of Governors of the Federal Reserve System, Mayor Fiorello H. LaGuardia, of New York, and Secretary of the Interior Harold L. Ickes.

Long Term Loans.

In outline, it is believed to call for a $1,500,000,000 public works program to be financed by sale of Government-guaranteed bonds through a Government corporation, with the funds to be loaned to States, counties, cities and other political subdivisions for flood control, highways, water-works, housing and other projects.

The loans would be long-term, possibly 50 years, and may be granted without interest but bearing a 2 per cent annual amortization requirement on principal.

President Roosevelt said yesterday at his press conference that his work-relief estimate of $1,000,000,000 would have to be increased. He did not mention a figure. From this observers concluded generally that at least $1,000,000,000 would be asked by the Administration for the seven-month period, June to January.

Mr. Roosevelt said he had not decided whether to combine messages on public works and work-relief, but added that both will be submitted soon, in any event.

Administration adherents of the pump-priming theory, however, were confident that victory was in their grasp. For months a bitter, no-quarter battle has gone on among the President's advisers, with one school demanding a return to the spending programs which scouted the 1932 depression and with the other contending that the public debt is too dangerously high to permit further tremendous expenditures and demanding early balancing of the budget, at all costs.

Mayors Urge Spending.

Yesterday the United States Conference of Mayors threw their support to wide-scale spending with a demand, which they submitted to the President during the afternoon, for a $3,000,000 work-relief fund in the next fiscal 12-month.

They told the President that from 3,500,000 to 4,000,000 workers had lost their jobs between last September and February of this year, while relief rolls had only begun to feel the impact of the deep business slump.

Hopkins, in his carefully prepared detailed statement before the unemployment committee, said that 18,000,000 men, women and children now are receiving public aid.

Hopkins compared this with the winter peak of 1933-34 when 27,000,000 persons received help and urged Congress to adopt a program of "permanent security."

The lean, tanned WPA chief, grayer and thinner since the death of his wife and his own long illness, brought on by overwork, impressed the committee with his able defense of WPA administration and results and by his compact arguments for "a substantial beginning of a dignified and adequate security program."

Hopkins, regarded as basically one of the more conservative White House advisers, stressed several times his belief that "Governmental spending, such as in PWA works projects and WPA relief projects, alone cannot reverse the downward business spiral. It is imperative that business recovery be stimulated."

Competitive System.

He said:

"Ours is a competitive system in which an overwhelming percentage of production is expected to come from producers operating for profit. I believe in that system."

Much of his statement concerned the philosophy surrounding WPA findings on the unemployment relief problem, which he termed the greatest of domestic concerns. He insisted he did not regard relief as now administered a "cure for the fundamental cause" of unemployment, but considered it "purely a palliative or technique for taking care of unemployment."

Praises the C. I. O.

He commented with pleasure on a recent statement by Myron C. Taylor, retiring head of the United States Steel Corporation, that the Commitee for Industrial Organization had honorably lived up to all its promises in its labor contract with the company, and added:

"To attain more than a fleeting prosperity, income must be distributed among the mass of people so that consumption can parallel output . . . That is why I feel some standards of wages and hours and a wide extension of unionization is to be desired. I don't see why it isn't possible to contemplate a situation in which practically all industrial workers are able to bargain collectively.

"Stability would be greatly furthered by acceptance of unions."

uary 6, 1938, and paid on February 15, 1938, a month after the corporation registered under the 1935 utility act.

$12,660,841 in Dividends.

Total amount of dividends covered by the application, both paid and proposed, was $12,660,841.

The commission approved the plan to charge the $1,607,175 in dividends on the preferred and preference shares to the surplus account, on condition that a similar amount be restored to this account out of the corporation's first earnings accumulated after December 31, 1937.

It also authorized the corporation to issue a maximum of $1,627,175 in dividends on preferred and preference stock payable on May 15, 1938, on condition that a like amount be restored to the surplus account from earnings this year.

Book Values Criticized.

The commission was extremely critical of the corporation's book valuations. Pointing out that the corporation claimed that its reported $13,261,609 surplus on December 31, 1937, consisted in whole or in part of earned surplus, the commission said:

"This result can be arrived at only by indulging in certain artificial assumptions, the principal one of which is that where directors declare dividends payable in stock they intend that such dividends shall be debited first to capital surplus, to the extent necessary to exhaust that account, and thereafter to earned surplus."

Branding the surplus as of "indeterminate character," the commission said that the corporation paid out $11,717,261 in dividends in 1936, while it earned only $9,786,385, and in 1937 distributed $12,162,983, while it earned only $11,361,691.

Earnings Not Increased.

"It can readily be seen that if there is not a material increase in earnings and if the management continues its present rate of dividend payments, a time will come when the company's entire surplus will be exhausted," the commission said.

It charged that the corporation's original surplus account of $67,372,510 reflects revaluation write-ups and "other questionable accounting items;" criticized the payment of dividends out of capital surplus, and pointed toward litigation seeking to wrest $88,000,000 from the corporation.

D.C. Heads Map Secret Attacks On Racketeers

Numbers Campaign Drafted as Warnings Deny Income Tax Frauds.

By Howard F. Wentworth.

As District enforcement authorities yesterday prepared secret plans to attack organized racketeering under the new and drastic "numbers" law, Emmett and Leo Warring, purported leaders of Washington's largest gambling syndicate, were arraigned in District Court on charges of income-tax evasion.

Hats in hand before Justice Daniel W. O'Donoghue, the brothers mumbled "not guilty" pleas to the blanket indictment accusing them of conspiring to defraud the United States Government.

Defense Gets Two Weeks.

Arraigned with them was Gordon L. R. Sadur and Henry L. Sherr, public accountants, charged as conspirators in the plot. They also entered "not guilty" pleas.

The court granted Attorneys Harry Whelan and Irving Goldstein two weeks in which to file defense motions. The third Warring brother, Charles (Rags) Warring, now serving a jail term in Atlanta Penitentiary, will not be arraigned until the scheduled trial in June, said United States Attorney David A. Pine.

The defendants were released on the same bonds which held them following the indictment return—$5,000 each for the Warrings and $2,500 each for Sadur and Sherr.

While they faced the court yesterday, more than a hundred enforcement officials were meeting at police headquarters to lay foundations for an intensive gambling "cleanup" throughout the city.

Secrecy Agreed Upon.

Following an hour's conference, attended by representatives of the United States attorney's office, high-ranking police officials and picked investigators of the detective bureau, Maj. Ernest W. Brown released the following statement:

"We have gone over provisions of the new numbers law and have had a round-table discussion in order to bring about uniformity and efficiency in enforcement."

Pine said he had formed an agreement with the police department not to reveal plans for the anticipated anti-gambling drive.

It was reported, however, that careful instructions were given police as to methods of obtaining and presenting evidence under the new law.

Capt. George M. Little, veteran head of the police vice squad, it was understood, is to be placed in complete charge of a surprise move to rid the city of prospering "numbers" operators.

"But I can't tell any of the details," he added.

Minimum Bet a Dime.

Major gambling operators are rapidly "closing up shop," Capt. Little said. One wholesale liquor dealer revealed that several known "numbers runners" have applied for positions as truck drivers, he added.

Rather than risk arrest while playing for small stakes, "numbers" men are refusing to accept penny bets and have boosted the minimum ante to 10 cents, it was reported.

In addition to Pine, Maj. Brown and Capt. Little, those attending yesterday's conference were Assistant United States Attorneys Roger Robb, John Wilson and David A. Hart, Inspector Bernard W. Thompson, chief of detectives, all precinct inspectors and captains and various members of the detective bureau.

Postlude

By Ray C. B. Brown.

Friday Morning Music Club presents Rose Maxwell Dickey, violinist; Mabel Frost, pianist; Mary Camm, soprano, and Francis Barnard, basso.

To Rose Maxwell Dickey and Mabel Frost the members and guests of the Friday Morning Music Club were indebted yesterday for one of the rare performances of Cecil Burleigh's beautiful "Ascension" sonata for violin and piano. The spiritual sincerity and exaltation of this work, together with its fine craftsmanship, entitle it to an honored place among sonatas, yet it is so seldom played that one wonders how eager we really are, as a people, to recognize our native composers. The reading heard on this occasion was enjoyable for its thoughtful and reverent feeling.

In the long and varied list of Cecil Burleigh's works are to be found another sonata, "From the Life of St. Paul," and three concerti, to which the attention of our violinists should be called. Himself a violinist, he writes exceptionally well for that instrument, and all his music is technically sound and artistically rewarding. He is not, by the way, as old as it would seem from the program note which confused his birth-year with that of Henry T. Burleigh, for he will celebrate his fifty-third birthday this year on Easter Sunday.

Mary Camm contributed to the program "So Shall the Lute and Harp Awake" from Handel's oratorio, "Judas Maccabaeus;" Vittorio Giannini's "Alla Fierra di Maestr' Andrea," Grieg's "Im Kahne," Elsa Maxwell's "I Need No Song," and Frank La Forge's "Come Unto These Yellow Sands." Her light soprano voice has clarity and true intonation, and she uses it with graces of phrasing.

Francis Barnard, a promising young basso, was heard in "Hear Me, Ye Winds and Waves" from Handel's "Scipione." Schumann's "Fruehlingsnacht," Musorgski's "Death's Lullaby," Jacqu s Wolfe's "Bone Come A-Knittin'" and Ernest Charles' "My Lady Walks in Loveliness." His voice, which has not yet steadied throughout its range, has sonority and good color, and one will watch his progress with interest.

97 Offenders Lose Permits To Drive in D.C.

66 Convicted of Operating While Drunk; 31 Had Judgments.

The Department of Vehicles and Traffic yesterday announced suspensions of permits and registration privileges against 97 motorists accused under the financial responsibility law.

In the cases of 66 drivers charged with driving while intoxicated, permits and license tags will be held for six months before the offenders are granted a hearing.

Thirty-one others faced suspension of driving privileges because of outstanding judgments. Their tags and permits will be restored after the judgments have been satisfied and liability insurance taken out.

At the same time yesterday, the Keystone Automobile Club, in a letter to Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen, attacked the recently adopted change in parking restrictions.

Claiming the "blanket prohibition" of parking within 100 feet at the approach side of light-controlled intersections would eliminate parking for approximately 40,000 cars, the club urged Commissioner Hazen to "reconsider" his decision.

The permit and tag suspensions were announced against the following persons:

Cherry Blossoms Periled by Chill; Drizzle to Abate

The steady rain which has drizzled on Washington since Wednesday night will be over before noon today, the Weather Bureau forecast last night.

After a low of about 42 before dawn the temperature is expected to climb to about 50. Maximum yesterday was 44 at 4:30 p. m.

Clear but cool weather should be on hand for Palm Sunday, the bureau hesitantly forecast. No warm weather is in sight for several days.

The continued coolness is expected to reard the double cherry blossoms until the middle of next week, the National Capital Parks Office estimated. The blossoms should be at their peak about Easter Sunday.

'Torso' Murderer Slays 11th Victim

By the Associated Press.

Cleveland, April 8.—A dismembered leg was found late today on the bank of the Cuyahoga River in the downtown section, leading coroner S. R. Gerber to announce "it looks like Cleveland's torso slayer had killed his eleventh victim" since September, 1934.

The leg, severed 48 to 72 hours before it was found, was dismembered with a scalpel or knife in the same fashion as the other victims, he said.

A WPA worker found the leg, which was taken to county morgue for X-ray examination. Police squads searched for additional traces of a body.

The leg was found in a storm sewer basin by Steve Morosky, 35. "I picked up a stick and poked at the white object," he said. "When I learned it was a human being's leg, I called police."

Dr. Gerber said he must await outcome of the X-ray tests before being certain of the sex of the victim.

The mad, surgically-skilled slayer's victims, before today, numbered four women and six men. Only two were identified. The last previous one was found July 6.

A special police detail has maintained 24-hour duty hunting the slayer.

Tariffs Are Found No Aid to Workers

Export industries are the most efficient in the United States and pay their workers higher wages than "protected" ones, Secretary of State Hull said yesterday.

In an analysis comparing average wages of 12 export industries with 12 from the group benefited by high import duties, he said the former paid an annual wage average per employe of $1,603 in 1929 and 1,364 in 1935. The protected industries paid $1,025 in 1929 and $827 in 1935.

Opposing a Senate resoultion to inquire into conditions of manufacture of imports, Hull wrote: It is a complete fallacy to assume that shutting out imports makes high wages."

Theta Chi Dinner.

Theta Chi alumni in Washington and members of the active chapter of the fraternity at the University of Maryland will hold their annual dinner this evening at 8 o'clock at the Kennedy-Warren. Cab Insurance Bill's Passage Expected Soon

Operators Fear Individual Policies Will Force Rate Increase.

Early passage of the long-pending bill to require Washington taxicabs to carry liability insurance was predicted yesterday by members of the District Committee of the House, to which the bill has been returned with Senate amendments.

Local cab companies foresaw a rate increase as a result. As passed by the House last July, the measure would permit fleet operators to post blanket bonds up to $75,000. Some companies favor the individual policy regulation. They claim it will tend to reduce the number of taxicabs in the District and eliminate undesirable drivers.

A taxicab insurance bill has been under consideration for almost eight years. In recommending the measure last August, the Senate District Committee pointed out that at that time there were more than 4,700 cabs in Washington and that this city stood alone in not requiring protection to the public through liability insurance.

The bill would be effective 60 days after passage.

Inventors Flood Rep. Stefan With Slump Solutions

By the Associated Press.

Representative Stefan (Republican), Nebraska, who recently called on inventors to think up something to solve unemployment, sought a solution yesterday of what to do with the solutions.

"Every mail," he said, "brings in a new pack. I'm getting so many that my head is spinning like a perpetual motion machine. But out of it all we may get a great idea."

Here are some of the suggestions:

Olathe, Kans.—"A grasshopper catcher will solve it."

Chicago—"Market my self-locking nail."

Chicago—"Market my two inventions. One removes foreign substances from the eye. The other reads the pulse."

Kansas City, Kans.—"My father has a machine that will recover gold from sand."

Ysilanti, Mich.—"Abolish the inventor and his labor-saving devices."

Leaders Call Ballot April 30 On D. C. Vote

60 Group Representatives Approve Plan of Citizen Committee.

All the recommendations of the executive committee of the campaign council, Citizens' Conference on Suffrage for the District, were approved last night by more than 60 representatives of civic and other groups, in session in the Herald-Times Building.

The recommendations, which moved Washingtonians a step nearer their first public ballot casting since 1872, called for a vote on April 30 on whether the District shall have suffrage.

The vote will be cast in 100 precincts. Every delegate was urged to get as many workers from his organization as possible out to arouse interest in the balloting.

Indorsement of the executive council came after a long discussion among the delegates in which various theories of handling the vote on District suffrage were aired. The theory of petitioning was suggested, but the action of the council in indorsing its committee eliminated that.

In another motion, adopted by the council, delegates pledged themselves to raise nominal sums from their organizations to finance the campaign and furnish offices in the Denrike Building.

Wilbur S. Finch, chairman of the committee, presided. New members named to the committee last night included Howard D. Woodson, James A. Holden, James McNamara, George A. Warren, Mrs. Mary Mason Jones, R. D. Rands and Mrs. Lester Buchanan.

Cummings to Talk At Law Banquet

Attorney General Homer Cummings will be the principal speaker when 350 lawyers, students and teachers of law gather at the Mayflower Hotel tonight at 7 o'clock for the twenty-first annual George Washington University Law School dinner.

Guests of honor will include Chief Justice D. Lawrence Groner and Associate Justices Harold M. Stephens, Justin Miller, Henry W. Edgerton and Fred M. Vinson, of the United States Court of Appeals for the District; President Cloyd Heck Marvin, of the university; the Rev. Francis E. Lucey, regent of Georgetown University Law School, and the Rev. Robert J. White, dean of Catholic University Law School.

Presiding will be E. Hilton Jackson, president of the George Washington Law Association. Chairman of the committee on arrangements is John W. Jackson, of the class of 1932.

A niece, Anne Bayard Underwood, and her two children, Bayard and Anne Elizabeth Underwood, are the principal beneficiaries under the will of Mrs. Olivia Deakins Becker, which was filed for probate yesterday. She left an estate valued at $484,500.

The estate includes real estate in the District, Virginia, Maryland and Florida, valued at $393,000 and personal property of approximately $91,500. Provision is also made for the establishment of a "home for gentle Southern women in reduced or straightened circumstances."

Mrs. Becker was the widow of Conrad Becker. The Washington Loan & Trust Co., and A. Camp Stanley are named as co-executors and trustees.

Cleanup Outlined To Junior Board

Joyce Smith outlined plans for the cleanup campaign sponsored by the Junior Board of Commerce before the executive committee of the First Ward Neighborhood Council yesterday afternoon at a meeting in the Church of the Pilgrims.

He emphasized the proposal for renovation of a house to be set up on the triangle green between the Commerce Building and Pennsylvania avenue, and presented plans for a poster contest to close April 14 and the enrollment of Washington youth to clean up alleys and vacant lots.

Whitney Broke Faith After Aid From Brother

Didn't Return Securities Kin Loaned $650,000 to Redeem.

By the Associated Press.

New York, April 8.—Richard Whitney, former New York Stock Exchange president who faces sentence for grand theft, acknowledged today he had accepted a $650,000 loan from his brother and then had broken the understanding upon which that aid had been tendered.

Whitney, whose Wall street brokerage house collapsed March 8, testified at a Securities and Exchange Commission hearing that his brother, George Whitney, began to be concerned as early as November, 1936, about the presence in the Richard Whitney portfolio of securities borrowed without collateral.

"He desired to know," the witness said, "how much would be required to remove these securities and the figure of $650,000 was set upon.

"He felt it would be very much better (for the Richard Whitney firm) to have cash and not to have such loans from individuals."

Then, he went on, George Whitney came forward in January of 1937 with $650,000—part of nearly $3,000,000 he advanced altogether—with the understanding that the company return the borrowed securities at once.

But, instead of immediately returning them, the bankrupt broker conceded, he continued to use most of them.

The SEC inquiry, the first it has held publicly, was one of the last legal proceedings Whitney is likely to face. He is to be sentenced Monday in Criminal Court upon two pleas of guilty to grand larceny—an offense for which the maximum penalty is 10 years imprisonment.

Lewis Encouraged After Flood Parley

Representative Lewis (Democrat), Maryland, said after a White House conference yesterday he had been encouraged in his efforts to obtain a $2,400,000 Federal allotment for a flood-control-water conservation dam on the Savage River about 30 miles above Cumberland, Md.

Lewis said a report had been made on the project by the War Department and the question now was where to get the money.

Ambassador Reaches Agreement With Union

An agreement covering wages and hours for about 75 service employes has been reached with the Ambassador Hotel, James McNamara, business manager for the Hotel and Restaurant Employes Alliance, announced yesterday.

Wage increases average $10 a month, with the biggest boost going to bellhops who under the agreement will get $1 a day as against $4.33 a month, McNamara said. The agreement also establishes an 8-hour day.

President Calls Leaders' Parley On Refugee Aid

U. S. Group April 13 Will Consider Co-operation in Helping Nazis' Victims.

By the United Press.

Backing up his plan to offer sanctuary to political, racial and religious refugees from Austria, Germany and other countries, President Roosevelt yesterday called a conference of representative Jews, Catholics and Protestants to meet at the White House April 13 to consider a program of co-operation.

At the same time the White House announced that 24 nations have responded favorably to Secretary of State Cordell Hull's suggestion for creation of an international committee to expedite the emigration of oppressed classes from Austria and Germany and to provide them safe haven.

The only unfavorable response came from Italy.

Mr. Roosevelt, it was disclosed, has addressed telegrams of invitation of Raymond Fosdick, Rockefeller foundation, New York City; Prof. Joseph P. Chamberlain, New York City; James G. McDonald, New York Times; the Rev. Samuel Cavert, Federal Council of Churches of Christ in America; the most Rev. Joseph F. Rummel, archbishop of New Orleans and chairman of the Catholic-Episcopal committee for German refugees; Lewis Kennedy, president of the council of Catholic Men, New York City; Henry Morgenthau, sr., father of the secretary of the treasury, and Bernard Baruch, both of New York City.

The White House said the conference would undertake preliminary consideration of the most effective manner in which private individuals and organizations can co-operate to facilitate emigration of the refugees. The group would work in co-operation with Hull's proposed international committee which is expected to assemble in Switzerland in the near future.

Process Rider Delays Senate Tax Bill a Day

Leaders Speed Measure Toward Passage After Temporary Snag.

Snagged on a $212,000,000 farm processing tax rider, the 1938 tax bill abruptly halted its headlong rush toward enactment yesterday, but Senate leaders greased the chute for passage today as all signs indicated the revenue measure would set an all-time speed record for tax legislation in the upper chamber.

Chairman Pat Harrison (Democrat), of Mississippi, of the Senate Finance Committee, wrung an agreement from farm-State legislators to vote on the controversial rider not later than 1 p. m. today.

Senator James P. Pope (Democrat), of Idaho, coauthor of this year's farm act, although beseeched by Harrison and Majority Leader Alben W. Barkley, of Kentucky, not to bring up the farm issue in this bill, insisted on his amendment and spoke for more than an hour in its favor.

Leaders Pace Carpet.

As Harrison, Barkley and others gloomily paced the green-figured Senate carpet, glancing in dismay occasionally at the clock, Pope plowed doggedly on with a heavy address defending his proposal to levy taxes on manufactured farm products to raise additional benefit payments under the new crop control legislation.

The tall, bald Idahoan explained that his amendment would slap a graduated scale of taxes on manufactured cotton, synthetic fibers, wheat, field corn, rice and tobacco in order to provide some of the funds for the vast outlay necessary to pay farmers the parity prices (1909-1914 scale) guaranteed them in the farm bill.

The Senate will meet at 11 a. m. in order to accommodate all the legislators who wish to pay tribute to the farmer before the vote at 1 o'clock.

One big hurdle remained—the La Follette amendment lowering all income tax exemptions, increasing the surtax on incomes up to $40,000 and boosting the levy on personal incomes from 4 to 6 per cent. Unpopular politically, but widely conceded to embody the soundest of taxation principles, the amendment is expected to divide the Senate almost straight across. It failed in the Senate Finance Committee by the narrow margin of one vote. Last year it was adopted in a close surprise vote as a rider to the nuisance tax measure, but was immediately reconsidered and rejected when Administration wheelhorses hurried in from the cloakrooms at the news.

A very close vote, either way, is expected today on this point.

Liquor Tax Boost Killed.

In the few actions taken yesterday before Pope got the floor, the Senate:

Knocked out a 25-cent per gallon addition to the present $2-per-gallon liquor tax. The extra levy had been added by the House.

Approved by a 53-16 vote an amendment offered by Senator Josh Lee (Democrat), of Oklahoma, imposing a $1,000 fine on persons shipping liquor into dry States.

Crushed an amendment, by a 61-13 vote, offered by Senator Henry Cabot Lodge, drastically revising downward the present pay roll tax schedule of the Social Security act.

Approved by voice vote a committee amendment exempting United States citizens from penalties and overdue taxes on income earned in the Philippine Islands between 1917 and 1920, inclusive.

Approved a committee amendment eliminating Engelmann spruce from a group of lumber items exempted already from an import excise tax.

whelming" victory at the battered little city of Taierchwang, in southern Shantung Province, had driven Japanese forces 7 miles from the city in all directions.

These reports said two Japanese divisions had been defeated decisively and were in full retreat.

Japanese continued to deny claims of Chinese successes, insisting Taierhchwang still was occupied by Japanese forces and that the drive toward Suchow, important Lunghai railway junction, was progressing.

Foreign sources, although unable to confirm either of the conflicting assertions, expressed belief the Chinese had scored at least a temporary victory and were inflicting heavy punishment on the invading troops.

Eye-witness accounts were lacking, but it was believed Japanese lacked artillery ammunition on account of harassed supply lines and thus were unable to cope with the numerically superior Chinese.

Foreigners said Japanese were rushing reinforcements to the central China front.

U.S.-Canada Tariff Reduction Studied

Government tariff experts took under consideration last night the possibility of reducing duties on American industrial, agricultural and fisheries products in renewing a reciprocal trade agreement with Canada.

Before the committee for reciprocity concluded its hearings, however, it heard miners of lead, zinc and feldspar and manufacturers of red cedar shingles oppose tariff reductions.

Negotiations for renewal of the agreement, committee members said, would be undertaken as soon as they conferred with the full trade agreements committee. Canadian trade experts have arrived here to begin the negotiations.

Rebels Counter Foe's Offensive With New Drive

2d Salient 12 Miles From Sea; Loyalists Seek to Bisect Franco's Spain.

By the Associated Press.

Hendaye, France, April 8.—Spanish insurgent legions drove a second swift spearhead toward the Mediterranean Sea tonight, counterbalancing a government drive southwest of Madrid.

The insurgents, already massing to assault the Catalonian coastal city of Tortosa, swept down Mount Turmell, 27 miles to the south, and were only 12 miles from the port of Vinaroz.

Government troops, meanwhile, struck into Caceres Province, 100 miles southwest of Madrid in an effort to launch a large-scale offensive of their own.

Insurgents massed 40,000 men in preparation for a new attempt to take Tortosa and cut completely the narrow link between Catalonia, Spain's northeastern corner, and the rest of government territory.

Just across the Ebro River the government had a defending army at least as large. A decisive battle for possession of that important highway city, some 95 miles southwest of Barcelona, was imminent.

To the north and west, insurgents methodically were consolidating their newly-won territory around Tremp after cutting Catalonia's power supply.

But southwest of Madrid, the almost forgotten thousands of government militiamen were reported to have advanced over a 25-mile front.

If the offensive should gain any great momentum, it would become a serious danger to insurgent Gen. Franco as Caceres Province reaches to the Portuguese border, constituting the connecting link between northern and southern insurgent Spain.

Insurgents in the town of Carrascalejo were caught by the advance and took refuge in a church where the government said they held a large number of civilian hostages.

The government offensive in the Guadalajara region northeast of Madrid apparently had been stopped. Insurgents reported they had launched a counterattack there which forced the enemy to cede some ground. Government forces were said to have lost heavily.

Tragic scenes were enacted in the Ara Valley which was traversed by thousands of fleeing government troops and civilians bound for the French border.

Refugees coming from Lerida and Huesca provinces swept the countryside almost clean of food. It was reported they left only enough supplies to last the population remaining behind for 48 hours.

Deserters Executed.

Barcelona, April 8 (U.P.).—Dr. Juan Negrin, Spanish loyalist premier and war minister, tonight ordered every able-bodied man of military age to report for service within 72 hours under threat of being taken before the tribunal handling high treason.

The tribunal has been in almost constant session for three days, imposing death sentences on deserters from the government's last-stand defense of Catalonia and upon convicted Fascist sympathizers.

government met in a stormy session and shouted their rage at its collapse.

Strike Possible Today.

[Labor extremists, it was reported, sought the calling of a general strike tomorrow by the powerful Central Labor Federation with its 5,000,000 Communist-dominated members, to protest Blum's overthrow.

The Union of Seine Trade Unions, representing the Paris region, met tonight to study the proposal.

[An epidemic of sit-down strikes spread rapidly and was said by labor leaders to involve 52,500 workers tonight when 10 additional factories were occupied, bringing the total to 29.

[The strikes, involving factories holding air ministry contracts, seriously crippled France's arms program.

National Union Is Aim.

[Hundreds of mobile guard and police reserves—massed around machine guns—surrounded the Senate Building during today's stormy debate, in readiness for any disorders among angry leftists.—Editor's note.]

Daladier, president of the Radical-Socialist Party, one of the components of the People's Front, has been minister of national defense and war ever since Blum formed the first People's Front ministry June 4, 1936.

His objective even before Blum fell appeared to be to form a cabinet designed to include members of the Center Right Party and possibly the extreme right, as well as the leftists, to make it a real national union government.

Caillaux, chairman of the Senate finance committee, led the fight which toppled Blum from his second premiership.

Blum Denies Dictatorship.

Challenging the Senate's right to overthrow a cabinet, Blum told the senators:

"I fear for the peace of the republic if the Senate lets itself be drawn outside the limits it once fixed for itself."

This was a reference to the disputed theory that only the Chamber of Deputies should have the right to overthrow a government.

"I am a republican," he went on. "I have been accused of wanting to be a dictator. I would fight tomorrow to re-establish the republic if it was overthrown.

"In the name of the real interest of the republic I address to the Senate a last call."

Caillaux Attacks.

Caillaux succeeded him on the rostrum and retorted:

"Are we supposed to be simply a registry house?

"We have thrown out a certain number of ministries and the chamber applauded.

"Now I want to stress the totalitarian spirit of many of the government's proposed measures. A capital levy would strike the farm people. The bill therefore expresses anti-peasant feeling while it should show union of all the nation's forces."

Progress In Housing.

Current gains in home construction are the more significant because of the slump in other economic activities. Industrial production is far below the level attained a year ago. But the Federal Housing Administration reports an increase of 40 per cent in the mortgages selected for appraisal in March, as compared with the same month in 1937.

Home construction is increasing against the general economic trend chiefly because conditions have been made favorable to investment in this field. The new housing act has made it possible for prospective home owners and builders of large-scale projects to obtain money on terms that were virtually unknown before. Perhaps even more important, the Administration has manifested a friendly attitude toward the building industry. The public response to these conditions suggests that private enterprise is eager to move forward whenever it has a fair chance of success.

Particularly encouraging is the widespread interest in large projects for families of moderate and low incomes. The Metropolitan Life Insurance Co. has just announced plans for "the largest garden apartment community in the country," to occupy a 120-acre site in New York. From 12,000 to 20,000 families will be housed. The company is financing its own project, but it is following a general plan already popularized by the FHA.

It is precisely this type of project which gives stability to the building industry, reduces costs and protects values by building up an entire new community. About three years will be required to complete the New York undertaking. During that period a large number of men will be employed at steady work. Materials will be bought in enormous quantities at substantial savings. In short, this housing will be provided by those methods of mass production which have been so effective in reducing costs in other fields of industry.

No less interesting is the fact that insurance companies are seeking an outlet for investment of funds in large housing projects. Several such companies have qualified to lend funds to limited dividend corporations under the FHA system. Their confidence in moderate-rental housing projects as a source of sound investment is likely to be contagious. The chief problem then would be careful direction to avoid rapidly rising costs and reversion to speculative abuses of the past.

After Nine Months.

It can be taken for granted that nine months ago, when the Japanese militarists used the Marco Polo Bridge incident as the excuse to take large-scale aggressive action against China, they never dreamed that they were launching a protracted war.

At the outset the odds appeared overwhelmingly on Japan's side. The international situation in the summer of 1937 made it most unlikely that any outside power would intervene in China's behalf. Russia was plagued by internal disharmonies. Great Britain and France were harassed by the Spanish crisis. The United States appeared firmly wedded to a policy of neutrality and isolation. The League of Nations was in total eclipse.

What the war lords of Nippon failed to take into account was the extent and determination of Chinese resistance. The whole world, including the Chinese themselves, acknowledged Japan's tremendous military superiority. And the Fabian policy which Chiang Kai-shek and the Nanking government had previously pursued in the face of aggression was taken as further proof of weakness. In any case, the war was expected to be short, with Japan emerging from it as the unchallenged master of eastern Asia.

After nine months, in which Peiping, Tientsin, Shanghai and Nanking have fallen to the enemy, China now appears to be stronger than ever and is even able to boast, for the first time, of a brilliant major success on the battlefield. The Japanese drive on Suchow, important railway junction north of Nanking, is said to have bogged down and the extended lines of the invading army are more and more subjected to the harassing tactics of the guerrilla forces. And China today is more united than at any other time in its long history. Under Chiang Kai-shek's leadership a new and powerful nation is being forged.

It would be a mistake to suppose that Japan is anywhere near the end of her rope. It would be an equal mistake to ignore the very grave difficulties under which China is fighting. But the fact remains that the balance of force in the undeclared war is more nearly equal today than it was nine months ago and that the longer the conflict lasts the less likely it will be that, even in the event of a final Japanese victory, the island empire will be in any position to capitalize its gains.

The Two-Party System.

Thomas Kennedy, former secretary-treasurer of the United Mine Workers and more lately Lieutenant Governor of Pennsylvania, is now seeking the Democratic gubernatorial nomination in that State. Naturally he has the backing of John L. Lewis and the C. I. O., to say nothing of the support accorded him by Senator Guffey.

As against Mr. Kennedy's strong support from the organized miners of the Keystone State must now be set the bitter hostility of the craft unionists who have seen the Pennsylvania Federation of Labor disrupted by the A. F. of L.-C. I. O. split and who have assembled at Harrisburg to reorganize their federation. Addressing the convention there this week President Green of the A. F. of L. referred bitingly to "Charlie McCarthy" candidates and urged his followers to vote against those indorsed by the C. I. O.

Personal animus against Mr. Lewis and fidelity to the non-partisan political philosophy of Samuel Gompers would be enough to explain the stand in the Pennsylvania primaries which Mr. Green has taken. Its effect is to align the two sections of organized labor against each other at the polls and therefore to indicate that a labor nominee may be defeated just because he wears that label.

This is a very different result from that anticipated by Samuel Gompers when he urged organized labor to unite behind any candidate favorable to its interests, regardless of party affiliation. But even the purely negative aspect of Mr. Green's stand will have advantage if it causes reflection among those anxious to form a powerful third party, drawing much of its support from labor circles.

The great mechanical advantages of the two-party system are far too real to be thrown aside merely because there are many voters who realize that neither of the old parties consistently represents their viewpoint on the problems of the day. Only under a clearcut two-party system is it possible to have one political group completely responsible for the conduct of government, within constitutional limitations, and another empowered to act as a critical opposition.

A third party in a democracy may easily prove the entering wedge for disintegration of party government. If there is room for a separate labor party there is also room for a separate farmer party, a merchants party, a single-tax party, a Catholic party, a Jewish party or for any other group which feels that its interests are inadequately served by the admittedly imperfect representation of the two-party alignment.

With a multiplicity of parties inevitably comes a breakdown of responsible government, as happened in Germany and is now seriously threatened in France. That is one reason why no really far-sighted person, even if they believed in communism, would ever vote the Communist ticket in this country. For the one certain result of a strong Communist party would be the establishment of a Fascist party to destroy it.

The Democratic and Republican labels may be vague, but the two-party system itself is eminently practical. Moreover it is flexible, for Republicanism is very different in Nebraska and New Jersey, just as the Democratic tag varies greatly in significance from Massachusetts to Georgia.

This Mr. Kennedy himself is emphasizing, by seeking nomination in Pennsylvania as a Democratic rather than a labor candidate. The opposition this arouses in the A. F. of L. camp may or may not mean his defeat. But the device of the primary enables this row to be fought out within the two-party framework. And that is far more important for the preservation of the democratic system than is generally realized.

That system will not be injured by the most profound alteration in the character and objectives of the dominant political parties so long as they remain, for practical purposes, only two in number. But if there should ever be three or more fairly evenly balanced parties striving throughout the country for electoral mandates, the future of American government would be far less subject to confident prediction.

Britain To Mexico.

Great Britain expects Mexico to return her oil properties forthwith. Unlike the United States, which has admitted the Cardenas government's legal right to expropriate, London insists that the nationalization of $400,000,000 worth of foreign oil interests was "inherently unjustified."

Here is one field, at least, in which London and Washington clearly have no preconceived plan of parallel action. We have asked only for adequate indemnification of the injured oil companies. In line with President Roosevelt's "good neighbor" policy, our tone has been consistently friendly. But the British government has no Pan-American idealism affecting its attitude towards the investments of its nationals. Moreover, extensive British investments throughout Latin America are threatened unless Mexico's actions are repudiated. Thus England has minced no words in demanding restoration of her properties.

In the end London and Washington may arrive at the same station in the oil controversy. It may prove that the British have been only more forthright. For the present condition of Mexican finances—now unsupported by American silver purchases—coupled with that country's poor record as a debtor gives cause to doubt that she will pay for her expropriations. And if Mexico cannot or will not pay, the United States will have little choice but to demand return of the oil properties, even as the British have done.

That this country expects nothing less than complete fair dealing from the Cardenas government was made plain in Secretary Hull's Pan-American Day address when he spoke, perhaps directly to Mexico City, of the need for "mutually beneficial economic intercourse based upon the rule of equal treatment," particularly in the New World.

Pump-Priming Again?

The dilemma of more unemployment and less money to relieve it has once more caught up with the Administration. President Roosevelt has acknowledged the seriousness of the situation by calling for a larger relief fund in the fiscal year 1939 and hinting that he may sponsor another public works program. And Administrator Hopkins had added an ironical touch to tragedy by asking Congress to approve a "permanent security program" for the unemployed.

If depression continues, more money for relief will probably have to be appropriated. No one would favor a policy that would inflict actual suffering upon men and women unable to find work. Congress will not deny the necessary funds to carry the destitute unemployed over a difficult period. That, however, is not the issue raised by the current discussions at the White House and the testimony of Mr. Hopkins before the Senate Unemployment Committee.

The foremost cause of the present depression, in Mr. Hopkins' opinion, was a failure of purchasing power in the hands of consumers to keep pace with production. That argument usually prefaces an appeal for more pump-priming. Even though Mr. Hopkins said that "Federal spending need not be justified merely as pump-priming," that objective appears to underlie his plea for more work-relief outlays. When coupled with the President's comments to newspapermen, it raises a gloomy assumption that another spending spree may be in prospect.

Contribution to temporary recovery was undoubtedly made by the first outpouring of Federal money. Now, however, the country is confronted by a very different situation. Business and industry have gone into a slump largely because of the uncertain outlook created by the Administration's own policies. Among those disturbing policies the long succession of unbalanced budgets takes a high rank. An attempt to counteract this distrust of the future by more spending, when the national debt is over twice as high as it was at the beginning of the depression, will in the long run aggravate the condition it is intended to relieve.

There is grave danger that Mr. Hopkins' "permanent security program" would thus undermine the security of the Nation instead of permanently improving the lot of the jobless. The very nature of the lavish spending program represented by the WPA prevents it from becoming permanent. The Treasury could not stand such a strain over a long period. Relief should certainly be placed on a more systematized basis than it now occupies. But that will necessitate demobilization of the WPA and restoration of the problem to State control.

Use of the WPA or any other agency to revive the pump-priming policy would merely add the risk of inflation to the present instability.

Another vanishing American is the one who spends less than he earns.

What this country needs is a device which will make it possible for the ultimate consumer to see an invisible tax.

Charlie McCarthy has become the No. 1 attraction on the air and Snow White heads the current list of motion pictures in popularity. People are getting tired of people.

There's some talk of the Government widening the Panama Canal. If it does, while it has its hand in, we wish it would widen the Atlantic and Pacific oceans.

National Fight on Group Medicine.

From the St. Louis Star-Times.

The fight of the American Medical Association against the co-operative health movement has reached such proportions in Washington, D. C., that a Congressional investigation has been asked, not only of the situation in the District but throughout the country. In Washington, the fight is between the District of Columbia Medical Society and the Group Health Association formed last fall by employes of the Home Owners' Loan Corporation.

Arguments against the co-operative are the same in Washington as elsewhere: It is "unethical" for private individuals to pool their resources and engage physicians and surgeons to treat them. It is "illegal." It is "communistic" (i. e., opposed to the dominating interests).

What makes the Washington fight particularly monstrous are the tactics involved. Specialists engaged by the health association have been expelled or threatened with expulsion from the medical society. Hospitals have been persuaded to close their doors on members of the association who seek entry under the care of the association's physicians. Specialists belonging to the medical society have refused requests to serve as consultants when the patient belongs to the health association and is under the care of an association doctor. (Are you listening, Hippocrates?)

Nickels And Dimes.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I, for one, sincerely hope that the "buffalo" nickel will be allowed to remain as it is and not be made a Jefferson coin. It seems to me to have the most distinctive and typically American design of any of our coins.

On the other hand, may I suggest that the dime would be peculiarly appropriate as a Jefferson coin because Jefferson was the father of our decimal system of currency of which the dime is typical. Moreover, I think the present design of the dime could be greatly improved.

On Buying The Senate.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Mr. Roosevelt has stated that you "can't buy the Senate." May I add that if anyone in the United States knows, it should be Mr. Roosevelt.

We should thank the Lord that we have a few sincere men in the Senate like Senator Clark of Missouri who are awake to what is going on and are trying to retain what is left of this constitutional government we have, and not turn the Treasury Department over to Mr. Roosevelt in toto.

Salutes Missed.

To the Editor o The Post—Sir: My pleasure and pride in our Army on Army Day was clouded by only one thing. And that was the lack (or seeming lack) of respect for the American flag! It may have been different in other lines of the march, but in my immediate vicinity, when the flag passed, only one man removed his hat, and only two police officers saluted.

The National Small Arms Bill.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I have in hand your editorial of April 5, entitled "Tools of the Criminal." As a lawyer, reasonably expert rifle and revolver shot, and long-time member of the National Rifle Association, I would appreciate your contemplating several aspects of the other side of the picture.

First of all, let us consider the effectiveness as a weapon against crime of the proposed firearms registration law. For many years the shooting fraternity of New York has groaned under the burden of the Sullivan law, a law far more stringent, and presumably more effective than the one under discussion. With the possible exception of Chicago, New York has more gun murders than any other city in the world.

The bureaucratic political tyranny which dogs the footsteps of the shooters of Gotham has thinned their ranks until it is safe to say that hardly a regiment of reasonably expert snipers could be recruited from the 7,000,000 inhabitants. Set up a system of the sort for the whole country, and see what happens to the supremacy of America as a nation of marksmen, outranking all others on earth. From the point of view of policy, in the present unsettled condition of the world, is this to be preferred?

Secondly, we have a presumption of innocence as one of the significant differences between our criminal laws, and that of nearly every other nation on earth, except England. Let us see what, in effect, happens to the presumption if the proposed bill becomes law. Here is a case in point: Mr. A, a reputable citizen, who believes in owning and knowing how to use pistols and revolvers, leaves his home vacant during a two-week vacation. During his absence the house is broken into, Mr. A's registered pet target gun is stolen and then used in the burglar's next raid, in the course of which he kills the unarmed householder who grapples with him in the defense of home and family. The murderer drops the gun and escapes, leaving no other clue than Mr. A's weapon.

Inevitably, upon his return, Mr. A is haled into court, where he is put under the burden of proving to a gun-shy jury that he had nothing to do with the crime. Perhaps he can prove no alibi and is forced to pay the penalty for a crime he did not commit. In any case, he has been subjected to the intolerable obloquy of a public, criminal prosecution, his name besmirched, and possibly his business reputation ruined.

The unanimity with which organized and unorganized shooters throughout the land, and especially the members and staff of the National Rifle Association, who so overshadow the proponents of this bill in grasp of the subject that it is to laugh, have fought its introduction and passage, is ample proof that no such authoritarian regimentation of the free men and women of this country shall ever be saddled upon us. MARKSMAN.
Washington, April 5.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I thoroughly disagree with the editorial in The Post of April 5, entitled "Tools of the Criminal." It is an editorial in favor of the Cummings proposal, which is a bill in the form of an amendment to the present national firearms act. The proposal is now before the House Ways and Means Committee.

As it now stands, it includes only machine guns and sawed-off shotguns, requiring a $200 fee for possession or transference of these underworld weapons.

There are so many objections to this law that only a few of them can be stated. Let us suppose that the criminals have been completely disarmed. How long would it be before they acquired new guns? Just about as long as it took them to get liquor during prohibition. There are also plenty of skilled craftsmen in the underworld who are perfectly capable of making deadly weapons.

However, suppose that the criminal hasn't been able to get a gun through these channels. If he wants one he will use his usual method of getting things, he would steal one. To quote from the above mentioned editorial. "Should it thereafter fall into the hands of the police (a registered arm) in connection with any crime, the owner would immediately be indicated." Now what if our thug has stolen the gun from an honest man and shot somebody with it? The citizen would have a pretty hard time explaining himself.

Small arms shooting is a recognized sport in this country just as tennis and golf are. Millions of people engage in it every year. If this legislation is passed it will be a terrible nuisance and added expense to all of them.

As far as I can see the originators of these laws are the ones who know the least about guns or they wouldn't make up the laws. Remember, an ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure. The worthy Attorney General should turn his attention to slum clearance. As for guns being the tools of crime, are they not also the tools of the police, and the protection of citizens?

The editorial says that the usual opposition to the proposal will doubtless be made, I certainly hope that it will. Already well over 20,000 sportsmen have written to the different members of the House Ways and Means Committee objecting to the bill. The only way to kill this bill, which is harmful to the shooter and harmless to the underworld, is for more of this type of opposition.

Christian Refugees.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: By reason of newspaper reports and headlines, particularly the latter, there has developed in this country a feeling that the problems growing out of Nazi persecution in Germany have been largely and particularly Jewish. Now that Naziism has spread to Austria, a similar feeling is growing up about the Austrian refugee. To many persons the term, "Christian refugee," is strangely unfamiliar. This should not be, for actually there are many Christian refugees from Germany as there undoubtedly will be from Austria.

As the agency charged with caring for Christian refugees from Nazi persecution, the American Committee for Christian German Refugees has found that this prevalent misconception among Americans has handicapped its work. "Why," we are often asked, "collect funds for Christian refugees? There are none."

To answer this we must turn to the figures. The pre-Hitler Jewish population of Germany was 550,000, thus setting a high for the total possible German-Jewish refugees. Against this, there are in Germany hundreds of thousands of so-called "non-Aryan" Christians who are potential refugees. This number includes liberals, Socialists and Christians of Jewish ancestry—that is, persons or families who have lived as Christians for many years, but who have been technically declared Jews by the Nazi race laws.

It is, of course, readily understandable how the misconceptions grew that the problems of Nazi persecution were largely Jewish. The Nazi race laws are anti-Jewish and the most dramatic and most obvious results of their discriminatory practice have been leveled at Jews. Secondly, Jewry, though never suspecting a future need for helping German Jewry, was prepared to help distressed European Jewry through such permanent relief organizations as the Joint Distribution Committee.

The American Committee for Christian German Refugees, 287 Fourth avenue, New York, has worked side by side with the Joint Distribution Committee. There has been no competition between us, the problem being much larger than anything either or both our organizations could handle.

The American committee was created by a group of American churchmen so that American Christians could show their Christianity to their fellow men of Germany, and now of Austria. It is not our desire to overdramatize the plight of the refugees, but we do want to present the picture so that those desirous of doing their part in helping these unfortunates may know of their plight and act accordingly. The work of the American Committee for Christian German Refugees is purely humanitarian. We are not seeking in any way to influence the political situation in Germany. JAMES M. SPEERS, Chairman.

Pensions For Homeowners?

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I see that Senator J. H. Lewis has sponsored a bill to abolish taxes on lands and houses used as habitations in the District, and is reported to have some further plan up his sleeve whereby the Federal Government is to make up the deficit. That means the rest of the country would be called upon for additional taxes which we owners of homes, apartment houses and slum dwellings would put in our pockets.

We would be in clover should the Senator's scheme go through. He knows or should know that the less land is taxed the higher its price will go. So what about those who haven't yet acquired their habitations? They would have to go to Maryland or Virginia to get them at a reasonable figure.

It seems to me it would be simpler just to pension us according to the value of our holdings and our valor in holding the District down.

Incidentally, I want to thank you for your editorial attitude on our international relations, or rather what they should be.

The Post Impressionist

Butch.

TO see him slipping around in the cloudy murk of his not always crystal globe, one would not suspect such vitality, but if I am ever called on to lay odds on the future oldest living goldfish, my money will go on the scaly nose of Butch.

He has survived a score of mishaps that would have sent many a lesser sprat to the garbage bag; in fact, he has been in the garbage bag, in all likelihood, more times than have been reported by his dutiful daytime custodian. One can never tell, from looking at Butch in the candlelight of evening, what the day has been. But, from previous observation, one can suspect.

First place, Butch's globe gets an occasional dishwashing, with soap and water, soap powder, scrubbing solution or anything that happens to come to hand. Sometimes this is done by the aforementioned dutiful custodian. Other times Daisy takes care of this. She takes Butch and his globe in her stride, with a capable twist of her wrist, and what is more important, Butch takes Daisy, with a couple of flips of his tail. As stated, whatever the day brings forth, Butch is in there at the close, eyes on the proceedings outside his residence with the same detached, philosophical calm with which he probably began life.

This latter detail about him, incidentally, is a mystery. He came to us through my wife's mother, an estimable, capable woman, but one whom it is our delight to suspect of being his arch enemy. We always go through the motions of hiding him out when she shows up, because Butch is a living reproach to her.

Originally Butch was one of a pair, and probably they stemmed from the tank in the dime store. They were left to my wife's mother by a forgotten benefactor, with a fairly large can of prepared goldfish food and some greenery. Being inclined to the itinerant, she brought them to us but, before departing again, broke the globe. This appeared to us an excellent way of avoiding further responsibilities in the way of twin minnows.

She picked them both up, however, and for lack of a regulation globe, put the flapping fish in a low-necked flower dish, arranging the rocks, spinach and other accessories neatly inside and, for good measure, giving them a light dusting from the food can.

With this elementary first aid, Butch and his playmate manifested every intention to carry on indefinitely. Their extended sojourn on the floor and in the apartment house air seemingly did them no harm.

Next morning Butch—he came by that name afterward—was still in the dish. His friend was out cold on the floor and with a dull glaze familiar to beach waders. How this happened we can only guess. We were all for getting Butch a new glass house, at that, but the donor of the pair insisted one would not live without the other. Just a matter of days, at most, she told us. No use buying a globe for him.

That was where Butch made a faux pas. He refuted this authoritative verdict by buttoning up and refusing to pass on to a better world. Far from it, he showed such evident zest for life in a dish that we eventualuly conceded him another dash of food.

Well, there stands Butch. Not so much like a stone wall, but devilishly like a dwarfed but tough old German carp that has been netted, hooked, gaffed or hauled by his tail through the years and is still indestructibly at large. My mother-in-law tries not to see too much of him when she is around. It must be a secret satisfaction to her that he no longer is his golden self, but has turned a repulsive, tinny white, with a faint streak of yellow down his back that belies the significance of such marking in his case.

Butch just gets an occasional sprinkle from the food can, whenever any of us think about it. What's in the can, or how old it is, we often wonder. He seems to like it. Formerly, after a feed, he and his globe-mate used to chase each other around for half an hour at a time, with suitable pauses for breath. With his tag-mate gone, Butch takes a light workout that consists of gracefully hurdling the spinach in his globe near the surface, where he gets the kick of almost flipping out of the globe, but never quite making it.

We did get him some new greenery a while back, after the custodian, or Daisy, in a burst of tidiness, threw out the old thatch and put in a sprig from some evergreen pine branches we had for decoration around the place.

This scarcely compensates for the life he leads. When his tub isn't scrubbed the water gets murky and stays so indefinitely. Butch glides serenely but spookily on. When his globe is washed, Butch is dumped unconcernedly out, with his rocks and greens, to the wash bowl, the bathtub or any handy repository.

Once his rocks were washed, and probably this definitely is wrong; ashes in his bowl, when we have company, he just spews out after tasting; once he was missing after his globe was washed, and only after considerable time did he announce his presence in the sink with a few faint slaps. We put him in the window at night because undoubtedly a smashing goldfish bowl, should an intruder attempt the passage, would wake us better than a dog's tail wagging, and probably the telepathic thought that something had happenend to Butch would do it otherwise. In any case, we feel sure Butch would be there, ready for a new globe.

NEWS of the capture of four giant pandas in China reminds me of a hunting experience which I must not forget to relate to Col. Theodore Roosevelt, jr., some night before a good crackling fire at the Adventurers' Club.

PEGLER.

There are said to be three males, or toms, among the new catch—a fact which should relieve the panda shortage here. Without bringing sex into this in an ugly manner, it is permissible, I think, to observe that among most animals, and particularly in the cat family, to which the panda belongs, friendship ripens into love very readily, and to hope that this is one of the panda's traits. We did have two pandas in this country until last week, when one died, but the situation was rather hopeless, anyway, as they were both little girls, and having two little girl pandas is like having two left shoes.

Several years ago Col. Roosevelt led an expedition into the wilds of China looking for a panda, apparently under the impression that a panda was a sort of dragon, for the adventurers all grew whiskers and looked like Gen. Grant by the time they came out lugging the pelt of a little thing which they had surprised in its sleep and shot. In justice to young Ted it must be reported that he claims the panda was not asleep, but crouching to spring and that he did write an interesting book about his long walk in China.

After that a lady named Mrs. William Harkness, jr., caught the two little girl pandas and brought them back alive, and the accepted method of trapping seems to be to set out a saucer of milk and a catnip mouse and say, "Here, kitty, kitty, kitty!"

• • • •

WELL, one day several years ago my friend Paul Gallico brought Mrs. Gallico into town from the suburbs to be near the hospital when their baby came and, having been told that a lady's every whim should be humored at such a time, he popped into a high-toned pet shop to buy a cat just because Mrs. Gallico remarked that it was funny.

"I want that cat in the window. Wrap it up. How much?" he said, and the guy said, "That is a genuine imported Siamese cat—$75."

My pal spun around three times, but bought the cat and a wooden cage and took it home by hand to the hotel where they were stopping. There he opened the cage and with a wild cry of "Pf-f-t! Miaow-ow!" the brute leaped across the room, into the fireplace and up the chimney. Seventy-five bucks' worth of cat!

Well, Paul called the manager and the engineer, and he himself went from floor to floor knocking at the doors of rooms on the same flue and getting insulted by retired English colonels and haughty old dames from Boston with mustaches and whiskers.

"Excuse me! Could I look up your chimney for my cat?" he would say, and they would say, "The idea! Be leaving, louse, or I shall call an officer."

So that night, while the rest were playing bridge, I went to the drug store and got a can of sardines, a bottle of milk and some catnip and set it on the hearth, and nothing happened until the rest of us had gone home. The Gallicos were turned in and just going to sleep when he hears a terrible spitting and yowling and crashing in the sitting room and went tearing in there in the dark, fell over a chair and landed on the hearth in a dive, where he slammed the fire screen over the opening. All cut and bleeding, he then switched on the light, and there was this dizzy cat bouncing all over the place and knocking down vases and things and squawking its head off. Paul finally trapped it in the cage and then discovered that his loving helpmeet was crying.

• • • •

"PAUL, do we have to keep that damned cat?" she says.

"No, Puddin'," he says. "I thought you wanted it."

"Me?" she says, "It's a terrible cat. I just said I thought it was funny."

The guy had told Paul that if he didn't like the cat he could return it, so next morning Paul takes the cat back, and the guy says, "Oh, well, what I meant was you could apply the $75 toward the purchase of some other pet."

Paul realized he was stuck, selected a Boston bull at $150, paid the guy $75 more, and that night took the dog out for the air in Central Park. He slipped the leash, the dog tore off in the dark, and that was the last he ever saw of the mutt and his $150.

The Once Over

By H. I. Phillips

A Dog Still Puzzled.

Peppy is slow to forget. The memory doesn't seem so all-consuming, perhaps, but she is still filled with a great sadness. She doesn't keep up that ceaseless search for a presence that has gone forever; in the garden she just stands still, her ears pricking to distant sounds.

• • • •

She no longer runs to the front door at the sound of a footstep, nor greets anybody with that curious little yelp of joy; only once in a great while does she leap up at certain note in an automobile horn: the note that would arouse her from her deepest slumber and bring her in a wild dash from any part of the house or yard. Now and then she still goes on a heartbreaking quest, looking up into the great armchairs for the lady who is not there. Then she turns away and sits down, despair and brooding still in her big brown eyes.

• • • •

She doesn't come bounding down the stairs in the morning. She's glad to see me, but it isn't the same gladness; she always reserved this for her mistress. Peppy likes to be near me now and troops faithfully at my heels. Sometimes she stares at me with a "We-two-have-got-to-stick-together-now" expression.

• • • •

When company comes she is alert and eager for a few seconds, but no longer. She turns from other ladies, knowing at a glance that they are not the one she pines for, not the ever-thoughtful lady who meant so much to her and gave her everything. These other ladies try to pick Peppy up in their arms, but she flees, as if they merely brought memories that bless and burn.

• • • •

Peppy leans to the menfolks more just now. Maybe only in them she finds the sturdier, substantial qualities that belonged to the great lady. She sleeps a lot and makes curious little yelps in her slumbers. Possibly in a dream she again sees Mary getting out of the car and coming up the walk to the front door, so happy and so full of life.

• • • •

Peppy hasn't barked since the great lady went away on that brilliant tropical morning. What a yelping she used to set up when Mary came home after an absence of a week, a day or an hour! But that's all over. Peppy will never be that glad again to see anybody.

• • • •

I'm fonder of her than ever and pay a lot of attention to her now, but it isn't the same great heart, the same intensity of devotion; the patience that would search her little paws so carefully for a burr or nurse her nose when she poked it into the bushes and got stung by a bee.

• • • •

Peppy is slow to forget. It doesn't seem possible she ever will. There are people you can't forget And a dog knows this so well.

Ottawa Letter

European Events Stir Dominion To Thoughts Of Foreign Policy And Defense With Pan American Union Proposed.

By Our Ottawa Correspondent.

Ottawa.

THE GREAT bouleversement in Europe caused by Germany's swift and successful move to absorb Austria, and the resulting controversy in Britain about foreign policy, have been followed with keen interest and not a little anxiety by the people and politicians of Canada. Public discussion of Canada's foreign policy and defense problems has been greatly stimulated. So special significance was attached to the recent presentation of the estimates for the defense program of the King ministry and their submission provoked a controversial debate.

Ian Mackenzie, the minister of national defense, who presented the votes, in opening the debate made on behalf of the government a carefully guarded exposition of its views upon foreign policy and defense, and in its course he made two significant statements. In the first place, he admitted candidly that for the protection of her Atlantic coast Canada must still depend in the ultimate resort upon the British fleet, and in regard to the Pacific he left the impression that considerable reliance was being placed upon the co-operation of the American navy. He ended his speech with a declaration of faith which is being interpreted as a warning that if a clash with the Fascist dictatorships did come Canada could not stand idly aside.

Policy Based Largely On 1926 Fundamentals.

THE FUNDAMENTAL principles of the government's defense policy, as Mr. Mackenzie described them, are based on the declarations of various imperial conferences. In particular he emphasized that of 1926, which stressed the primary responsibility of each part of the Commonwealth for its own defense, the common cause of the security of the whole Commonwealth, and the right of each partner government to make its own decision about military action.

In a survey of public opinion in Canada about foreign policy and defense problems the Minister discerned the existence of five different schools of thought. There were, firstly, the "diehard" imperialists, who regarded Canada as bound to accept any foreign policy of the British government, and stood by their slogan, "When Britain is at war, Canada is at war"; secondly, there were the isolationists, who held that Canada's geographical position and economic interests compelled her to disassociate herself from troubles in other parts of the world, especially Britain's European complications and her commitments in Africa; thirdly, there were the pro-League enthusiasts who wanted Canada to back with all her resources a system of collective security even to the extent of sanctions; fourthly, there were the advocates of a policy by which Canada would join the Pan-American Union as a league of nations for the Western Hemisphere. Then he elaborated at some length the views of a fifth group which he claimed was the largest in the country, and to whose attitude he implied the King government was sympathetic.

By his account this group did not believe in automatic commitments either for war or for neutrality; it would co-operate with Britain or with the League of Nations in a war for a principle or for the preservation of the liberty of the world if it was convinced that this liberty was seriously threatened. But it refused to imperil Canadian unity by accepting in advance either one of two propositions—firstly, that when Britain was at war Canada must automatically go to her support with all her resources, or secondly, that when the League ordered the application of sanctions Canada was bound to take action.

Mr. Mackenzie made it clear that the defense program of the government was predicated on the assumption that only the policy of the fifth group had any chance of commanding a majority in Canada; it was therefore primarily directed to the protection of Canadian territory but it did not lose sight of the possibility that Canada might have to participate in a general war for frustrating Fascist designs upon the rest of the world.

French Liberals Give Support To Proposals.

THE DEFENSE vote has given rise to an interesting debate which is still proceeding and a variety of opinions have been expressed. Ministers were nervous lest there should be a repetition of the insurgency shown last year when a group of their own supporters, chiefly French-Canadians from Quebec, voted against the rearmament program. But this year while three French-Canadian Liberals have already restated their opposition to the program on the ground that it takes Canada along the path of militarism toward another war, some of the leading malcontents from Quebec have announced a recantation of their former views and supported the defense votes.

The chief opposition has come from the spokesmen of the C. C. F. Party, who have insisted that before the defense votes are passed there should be forthcoming from the ministry a clearcut exposition of its foreign policy, in order that the Canadian people should know the real objective of the rearmament program. They were very critical of the foreign policy of the British government, which they denounced as a betrayal of democratic principles, and wanted the government to reaffirm publicly the allegiance of Canada to the League of Nations and the principle of collective security.

They took the view that under the present nebulous arrangements Canada could not escape being dragged automatically into any sort of war upon which the British government elected to embark. They concluded that now was the time, before any desperate crisis had developed, to make it plain that Canada reserved complete freedom for herself to participate in or stay out of any war in which Britain engaged.

Faced with this demand for an exposition of the ministry's policy, Premier Mackenzie King intervened to say that he had for some time past been looking for an opportunity to make a full statement about it, but that it would now have to be deferred until the Easter recess, which ends on April 25, was over. At the same time he made an explicit denial that Canada had offered any advice to the British government about the problem of Czechoslovakia; he explained that the British government had kept Ottawa fully informed about developments but it had requested no advice and been offered none.

Mackenzie King Clears Misconceptions Of Talk.

THE PREMIER also took the opportunity to clear up a misconception about a speech he delivered in Paris on July 2, 1937. He had been quoted in certain British papers as saying that Canada would fly to the side of Britain in time of danger. He now declared that this was not an accurate report of his observations and he quoted his exact words as taken down by the chief European correspondent of the Canadian Press which by this account were merely to the effect that the Canadian people prized above everything else the freedom which they enjoyed and that if it were imperiled from any source whatever, they would join together again with the other partner nations of the Commonwealth for its preservation.

Paul Martin, a Liberal, argued that recent constitutional developments within the Commonwealth had made it quite clear that Canada had the right to remain neutral when Britain was at war. In order to complete immunity from any imperial commitments he urged a termination of some existing arrangements about naval bases in Canada which can now be used by British warships. He maintained that the basic considerations in Canada's foreign policy should be firstly national unity and secondly her dual relationships with Britain and the United States. He favored Canada retaining her place in the Commonwealth but he also held that on account of her position as a North American state she should join the Pan-American union.

The trend of the debate indicates that the government will have no difficulty in getting its estimates through, as the Conservatives, who criticize only their inadequacy, will support them.

Blum Quits

By Barnet Nover.

The French Senate In The Saddle.

AGAIN AND AGAIN in the course of his long and storm-tossed political career, Joseph Caillaux has been accused of harboring dictatorial ambitions. This he has always denied, though sometimes his denials were none too vehement—like Caesar's refusal of the kingly crown.

Now, at 75, the man whom Clemenceau clapped in jail for allegedly treasonable dealings with the enemy in wartime, can truly boast that he is the most powerful individual in France. Without his approval and that of the 313 other graybeards of the Senate who look to him for leadership, apparently no government, however broad its popular base and however greater its majority in the Chamber of Deputies, can survive.

Caillaux has proved this point twice in less than a year. He proved it last June when he was instrumental in turning out the first Blum government and he proved it again Friday when Blum once more was the object of his wrath.

THERE CAN be no question that the plan proposed by the Blum cabinet for dealing with the extremely critical financial crisis was far-reaching. In effect, the government asked that, subject to later confirmation by Parliament, it be entrusted with dictatorial powers for three months to take any action deemed desirable to safeguard the franc, balance the budget and provide needed funds for the expanding rearmament program. And some of the more specific measures advocated by M. Blum and his colleagues, the capital levy for instance, were of dubious usefulness.

The Chamber agreed, although by a small affirmative vote. But the Senate balked. And following its overwhelmingly adverse vote, Blum resigned.

TWO ASPECTS of the situation require comment. In the first place it is very rare, indeed, for a French government to resign as a result of an adverse vote in the Senate. The presumption has always been that the controlling body in the French Parliament is the Chamber of Deputies. That body is elected directly by the people while the Senate is elected in a complicated fashion by indirect vote with the scales heavily weighted in favor of the conservative rural areas as against the more radical urban districts.

The Blum government's resignation shows how much power the Senate wields at the present time, unrepresentative though it may be of French public opinion.

The second point to remember is that during the past two years the Senate has not opposed far-reaching legislation as such. Following the Popular Front sweep in the elections of June, 1936, the Senate, though not without grumbling, approved the first Blum government's near-revolutionary social reform program, which, in the opinion of many, lies at the bottom of France's present difficulties. And when Camille Chautemps asked for the decree powers refused Blum, the Senate did not balk at giving them to him.

• • • •

THE SENATE'S objection to the Blum demands arose out of the fact, therefore, that they emanated from a Socialist premier backed by an all-Left coalition and not to the demands in themselves.

Indeed, it can be taken for granted that if Blum's successor is a man more to the Right than was Blum and heads a government less dependent than was Blum on the extreme Left, the Senate will readily agree to the very program it has just rejected.

In this particular the French Senate expresses the attitude and the sentiments of French conservatives in politics and out. They are determined to smash the Popular Front by hook and by crook and, if possible, to smash the social and economic program which the Popular Front was elected to put into effect. And, apparently, not even the existence of an international crisis of the first magnitude, one which threatens to reduce France to the status of a second-class power, has swerved them from this aim.

Thus, when last February Blum sought to create a broad-based national coalition to govern the nation during the present domestic and international emergency they would have nothing to do with it. And during the three days that Blum vainly tried to form a government, Hitler marched without opposition into Vienna and changed the face of Europe.

The Conservatives' price of joining such a government as Blum wanted to establish was, first, that it should be headed by someone other than a Socialist and, secondly, that the program of such a regime should be anti-Popular Front.

• • • •

THAT THE French Right will have its way entirely is open to question. An attempt to set aside to any substantial degree the social legislation already in force would probably produce an epidemic of strikes of the first magnitude. Nor is it likely that the Socialists or even the Radical Socialists who, it must be repeated, are neither radical nor socialists, would agree to such a repudiation of the election of 1936.

If, however, a national government can be brought into being that will check-rein the Right's excessive urge to sabotage social legislation while, at the same time, modifying those laws which obviously have increased France's economic and financial difficulties it would be a boon to France and to Europe.

With France rent by internal feuds and political passions, the dictators can do just about what they want to. A strong France, on the other hand, can prove a factor of incalculable importance in stemming Europe's tide toward chaos.

Collective Action

By Thomas Wolfe

Against Isolation.

I THINK that "isolation" is a rhetorical concept, useful to politicians for the purpose of strengthening their majorities at home and of reassuring their constituencies. Beyond this, I do not believe "isolation" has any real meaning, because it has no existence in reality.

Because I believe in individual security, I believe in collective security, and do not think it is possible to have one without the other. And in the light of the events of the past two years it seems manifest that the only way to get security is through collective action. And although I hope, together with most other people, that the necessity for force may be avoided, it cannot be avoided by denying that such a necessity may exist. It becomes increasingly apparent that the only effective way to meet armed aggression may be armed resistance; the wheels of a great war machine, such as that which Germany has today, are not going to be stopped, once they have begun to roll, by a handful of reproving phrases or by a batch of diplomatic protests. If anyone ever furnished the world with a blueprint of his intentions in advance, it was Adolf Hitler. Now, since he has checked his announced objectives off the list one by one with the precision of a riveting machine it seems reasonable to suppose that he will continue to do so as long as he is unimpeded and as long as he realizes that there is no formidable and united forces that will, if necessary, resist him.

I do not know what form that force will take, or what will be the composition and alignment of its elements, because at the present moment it does not exist; but it is evident that if fascism is to be checked, such a force will have to exist.

Scaring The Skirts

"Give women an economic or war scare and the first thing they do is to cover up their legs. But let them see happier times ahead and they shorten their skirts." So says Miss Thelma Roberts, touring the country to see how quickly Broadway styles spread. Just at present, she concludes from the medium-length skirts currently fashionable, American women are not fearful of either war or depression.

Miss Roberts' observations may be true, but if so why? We present the puzzle to our readers with only one suggested solution, in which we have small faith. Do women wear shorter skirts in good times because they feel freer to kick up their heels? Because they don't want to be hampered even that trifling bit in the pursuit of enjoyment? We haven't any other explanation that seems to probe much below the surface of this phenomenon. Indeed, we would have said that financial hard times would bring a shortening of skirts for economy's sake rather than a lengthening. We hope the psychologists or the stylists, or our own woman-wise readers, will enlighten us.

Navy Shake-up Affects 20 in High Command

Promote

Fairfield for Richardson.

The assistant chief of naval operations, Rear Admiral James O. Richardson, will follow Admiral Andrews as chief of the Bureau of Navigation, and Rear Admiral Arthur P. Fairfield, now on duty as a member of the general board of the Navy, will become assistant chief of naval operations.

Admiral Rowcliff has been ordered to command of Cruisers, Scouting Force, relieving Rear Admiral Joseph K. Taussig, who succeeds Rear Admiral Frank H. Brumby, as commandant of the Fifth Naval District, Norfolk, Va. Admiral Brumby retires next October.

The commander of Cruiser Division 3, Rear Admiral Harold R. Stark, will be placed in charge of Cruisers, Battle Force, succeeding Rear Admiral Julius C. Townsend who has been ordered to duty here.

The Navy's budget officer, Rear Admiral Husband E. Kimmel, will become commander of Cruiser Division 7, following Rear Admiral John Downes who was named president of the Naval Examining Board.

Ingersoll Relieves Sadler.

Capt. Royal E. Ingersoll, director of War Plans in the office of the chief of Naval Operations, will relieve Rear Admiral Frank H. Sadler in command of cruiser Division 6. Admiral Sadler has been ordered to duty in Washington.

Capt. Chester W. Nimitz, assistant chief of the Bureau of Navigation, who will be promoted to rear admiral this summer, will follow Admiral Stark as commander of cruiser Division 3.

Capt. William L. Friedell, chief of staff and aide to the commandant, Fourteenth Naval District, Pearl Harbor, T. H., relieves Rear Admiral W. Bagley in command of Mine Squadrons, Battle Force, and Admiral Bagley follows Rear Admiral Clarence S. Kempff, who retires next month, as commandant of the Mare Island, Calif., Navy Yard.

Rear Admiral Walter R. Gherardi, commandant of the First Naval District, Boston, was ordered to duty at the Navy Department.

Once On Mayflower.

A former commander of the Presidential yacht, Mayflower, Admiral Andrews served as Naval Aide to Presidents Harding and Coolidge and then was attached to the Naval War College. After serving as chief of staff to the commander, Battle Force, he held the same office with the commander-in-chief of the United States Fleet before becoming chief of the Bureau of Navigation in 1935.

Admiral Tarrant, who assumed command of the Scouting Force two years ago, previously directed the Cruiser Division Four. He also has been commander of the Navy's important base at San Diego, Calif.

Capt. Todde, commander of the new cruiser squadron, formerly served as Naval Attache in Rome. In 1928 he was appointed commander of Destroyer Division 26, Scouting Fleet, and five years later received command of the battleship Idaho. He was commandant of midshipmen immediately before going to the Naval War College for instruction.

Woodson an Attorney.

The President's naval aide, Capt. Woodson, who will succeed Admiral Rowcliff as judge advocate general of the Navy, has been assistant judge advocate general on two occasions. He first assumed the office in 1921 and returned to it for a three-year tour of duty ten years later. He is a member of the bar of the Supreme Court.

Admiral Richardson, new chief of the Bureau of Navigation, served as commander in chief of the Atlantic Reserve Fleet in 1914 and later was placed in charge of the Naval Petroleum Reserves. In 1935 he was appointed chief of staff and aide to Admiral Joseph M. Reeves, commander in chief of the United States Fleet and two years later was made commander, destroyers, Scouting Force. He became assistant chief of naval operation in July of last year.

Early in the Spanish civil war, Admiral Fairfield, new assistant chief of naval operations, was placed in command of Special Squadron 40-T, operating in European waters, from September, 1936, until December, 1937, when he returned as a member of the general board.

At the outbreak of the World War Admiral Rowcliff was gunnery officer on the staff of Vice Admiral D. W. Coffman, commanding the battleship force of the Atlantic fleet. Since the war he has served as commander of the Forty-first and Forty-second Destroyer Divisions of the scouting fleet and as fleet tactical officer on the staff of Admiral R. E. Coontz, commander in chief of the fleet.

Taussig Made Commandant.

Admiral Taussig, who will become commandant of the Fifth Naval District at Norfolk, commanded the first division of destroyers sent abroad during the World War. In 1933 he served as assistant chief of naval operations.

A former commander of Battleship Division 2, Battle Force, Admiral Brumby, has also directed the Scouting Force and commanded the Battle Force. He has been commandant of the Fifth Naval District—Norfolk—and the Naval Operating Base there since 1935.

Admiral Stark, who has been ordered to command of Cruisers, Battle Force, was formerly Naval Inspector of Ordnance in Charge, Naval Proving Ground, Dahlgren, Va. He was appointed chief of the Bureau of Ordnance in 1934 and served there until January, 1937, when he was made commander, Cruiser Division 3, Battle Force.

Relieves Townsend.

He relieves Admiral Townsend, who served from 1933 until 1936 in the Ships Movements Division of the office of the chief of Naval Operations.

Admiral Kimmel commanded Destroyer Squadron 12, Battle Fleet, from 1928 until 1930, when he came to the office of the Chief of Naval Operations. In 1933 he assumed command of the battleship New York and became budget officer of the Navy in 1935.

His predecessor, Admiral Downes, who will become the president of the Naval Examining Board, was on duty in the Bureau of Navigation from 1931 until 1934 and then was ordered to sea as chief of staff of the scouting force. In March, 1935, he commanded the Ninth Naval District and Great Lakes Training Station. He has been in charge of Cruiser Division Seven since December, 1936.

Capt. Ingersoll has been chief of the War Plans Division for the past two years. He formerly commanded the heavy cruiser, San Francisco, and has also served in the office of fleet training.

Sadler Coming Here.

Rear Admiral Sadler, who shortly will be ordered here, is a former director of the Navy's Postgraduate School at Annapolis. He commanded the flagship Pennsylvania from 1933 until 1935, then served on the staff of the Naval War College before assuming charge of Cruiser Division 6, Scouting Force.

Capt. Nimitz, who relieves Admiral Stark as commander of Cruiser Division 3, holds the Naval War College diplomas for the correspondence and senior courses. He was last at sea as commander of the cruiser Augusta from 1933 until 1937.

Capt. Wilhelm L. Friedell was stationed at the Naval Gun Factory here from 1933 until 1935, when he assumed command of the battleship Colorado. He holds the Navy Cross for service during the World War while serving as commander of the submarine forces in European waters.

After completing the course at the Naval War College, Admiral Bagley served on its staff until two years ago. He formerly was in charge of the officers' detail division in the Bureau of Navigation, and in 1935 was ordered to duty as assistant chief of the Bureau of Navigation.

Kempff Hydrographer.

Admiral Kempff served as hydrographer of the Navy Department from 1927 until 1930, and then commanded light cruiser division 2, scouting force. He also has served as captain of the yard at the Norfolk Navy Yard and as commandant of the Navy Yard at Portsmouth, N. H.

The Federal Diary

By Scott Hart.

Personal Opinion.

We have read with interest the latest statement from the National Civil Service Reform League in support of the civil service change as contemplated in the reorganization bill. And but one conclusion comes, after all is said and done about it:

If the Congress had, in the last 55 years, given the commission the financial and other support it so obviously needed; if it had otherwise kept its hands off the public service so far as appointments are concerned, there would now be but little, if any need, for all this fuss.

So far as we know, no charge of bungling the job has been directed at the present commission. If at times it has been tardy in the handling of its vast duty, the reason is for lack of support and facilities which the Congress might have provided.

If anyone desires with any degree of conscience a pure merit system in the Government, the place for expression is before the Congress—which alone has abused the system. How anyone thinks there can be a pure merit system, with the Congress thinking that to the victor belongs the spoils, would be most difficult to explain.

How a one-man commissioner—approved by the Senate—can by some hoped-for slight-of-hand magic keep politics out of appointments, is another sweet mystery. The commissioner, mind you, would be approved by the Senate—and the Senate will know what to expect of its own. That is plain realism. The case may be adorned with all the amendments and technicalities the human brain can muster to confuse an issue with.

But the words are there: "With the advice and consent of the Senate." And if the Senate ever has given up—or shown the slightest disposition to abandon—its ancient prerogatives of the plum, the inclination has not been noticeable to the naked eye, or to the eye aided by a powerful microscope.

"The argument for such a change has been based on the fact that division of responsibility among three persons leads to 'buck-passing' and lack of positive accomplishment" . . . and so on. And, for the sake of argument, we grant that this may be true. But how can there be accomplishment—accomplishment to the ideal—when the whole civil service set-up has been an unwanted child, improperly supported, kicked down the back steps at every turn and subordinated to a slogan of spoils?

If there is any sincerity in the move to reshape the commission, the Congress to a man might publicly subscribe to a policy in the reverse of the present one which is loading the service with appointees political. Should they make such declaration, and abide thereby, it would make no difference whatever whether the commission numbered one of 70, for the merit system would come automatically to the service and all who want efficient Government would be pleased.

We call to Federal employes' attention: Reports come to us from citizens, mostly unemployed ones, that "well-paid" Federal workers are working at nights in jobs that might be filled by the currently unemployed. This is one of the best ways we know to bring public opinion down on the service. Our informant says he knows and can name, specific instances, which rile him terribly. He argues that one job—if the job pays a living wage—is enough for one man in these pressed times.

Newcomers.

The FCA welcomes the following to its local force: Velna Whittington, of Miami, Fla.; Helen Lipsman and Penelope Cosmas, of Omaha, Nebr., and A. Garnett Bonwell, of Council Bluffs, Iowa, to the administrative division, stenographic section; George M. Harris, of Richmond, Utah, to the credit union section, examination division . . . The other day a gentleman walked in one of the FCA offices—after office hours—to find a big waste-basket blazing nicely. And this, after all the appeals which have been made about fire in that particular building! Even one from the Governor himself . . . While on the subject of the FCA, we note that Anne Jane King has been elected chairman of the Pro-Tem Club, a useful organization . . . Edna Earle Rosenheim (administrative division) has been awarded an 80-word expert typewriting prize by a local business college. Winners of such awards must maintain a typing speed of 80 words per minute, or better, on five separate tests . . . The Farm Credit Club holds its bicycle trip at 2:30 p. m. today; for reservations call Alma Day, extension 251.

Notes.

One week from tonight the Young Democrats of Oklahoma, Inc., dance at the sumptuous Democratic Club headquarters, 1500 Rhode Island avenue northwest. The hours are from 9 to 1; all Oklahoma Congressmen will be there. In charge are Harold Land, president; T. Casey, chairman, social committee, and Jim Donaghy, publicity and handy man . . . The Civil Service Commission announces an open competetive examination for the position of senior inspector, engineering materials (timber), in the Navy Department, at Parkersburg, W. Va (How did the Navy ever get in those hills?) Anyway, the entrance salary is $2,600; the closing date is May 3.

The National Archives now displays in its exhibition hall a number of documents in commemoration of the birthdays of Presidents Jefferson, April 13; Monroe, April 28; Buchanan, April 23, and Grant, April 27 . . .

The U. F. W. A. wants a library, and asks: "Have you a little book in your home?" If so, you might bring it to the U. F. W. A. book party tonight at the headquarters, 532 Seventeenth street northwest. The event begins at 8:30 o'clock. Admission is one book.

WHY IS THE U. S. PAYING MORE ATTENTION TO LATIN-AMERICA?

In commemoration of Pan American Day which will be celebrated this week, The Post is publishing a timely and interesting article on Latin America in Sunday's Post by John Clark of The Post's Editorial Staff. Clark was one of the five editorial writers recently awarded a Nieman Fellowship for study at Harvard University, where he will specialize on Latin-American history.

In this article, Clark tells how Vargas checked the Nazi movement in Brazil . . . how the United States is maintaining its good neighbor relationships and other interesting facts about Latin America. Don't miss this article

THOUSANDS THRILLED BY GRAND BEER-Y FLAVOR OF BEER RUSHED FROM THE BREWERY IN FAST TRUCKS

That thousands of beer drinkers are switching to Gunther's is shown by big increase in sales in last few weeks!

GUNTHER'S Washington sales have taken a terrific jump in the past few weeks. Under Gunther's sensational new delivery plan, which insures you beer with true "brewery" flavor, as it is rushed direct from the brewery to your dealer in fast trucks every day, thousands and thousands of beer drinkers are joining the swing to Gunther's!

Gunther's new delivery plan is not something that "just happened"... there are very definite reasons for it. Here is why it is really important... vitally important to all lovers of good beer:

First: Light is the enemy of beer. No matter how well it is brewed, beer exposed to light for any length of time deteriorates rapidly.

Second: Beer ages in the wood. Beer must be aged to be good. But it doesn't age or improve in a bottle! Time gradually destroys its true "brewery" flavor once it has left the wood!

Third: Careless handling hurts beer, too. Carelessly stored, out in the open, or in ordinary warehouses, it is subject to the ravages of temperature, light, and early deterioration.

If there is a product more sensitive, in many ways, than milk, it is beer! And we found that our beer was not always handled properly in the past.

So you see why Gunther's is now delivering beer right from the brewery direct to your dealer in fast trucks daily. It costs us more money. But you get perfect beer in every bottle!

The next time you order beer, try Gunther's! Learn the difference true "brewery" flavor makes! Drink and serve a beer that comes to you just as it was brewed for you at the brewery... a beer that is dry and beer-y... so that it doesn't give you that "filled-up" feeling like the sweeter, heavier type beers... a beer that is the odds on favorite of most real beer drinkers... Gunther's dry, beer-y Beer!

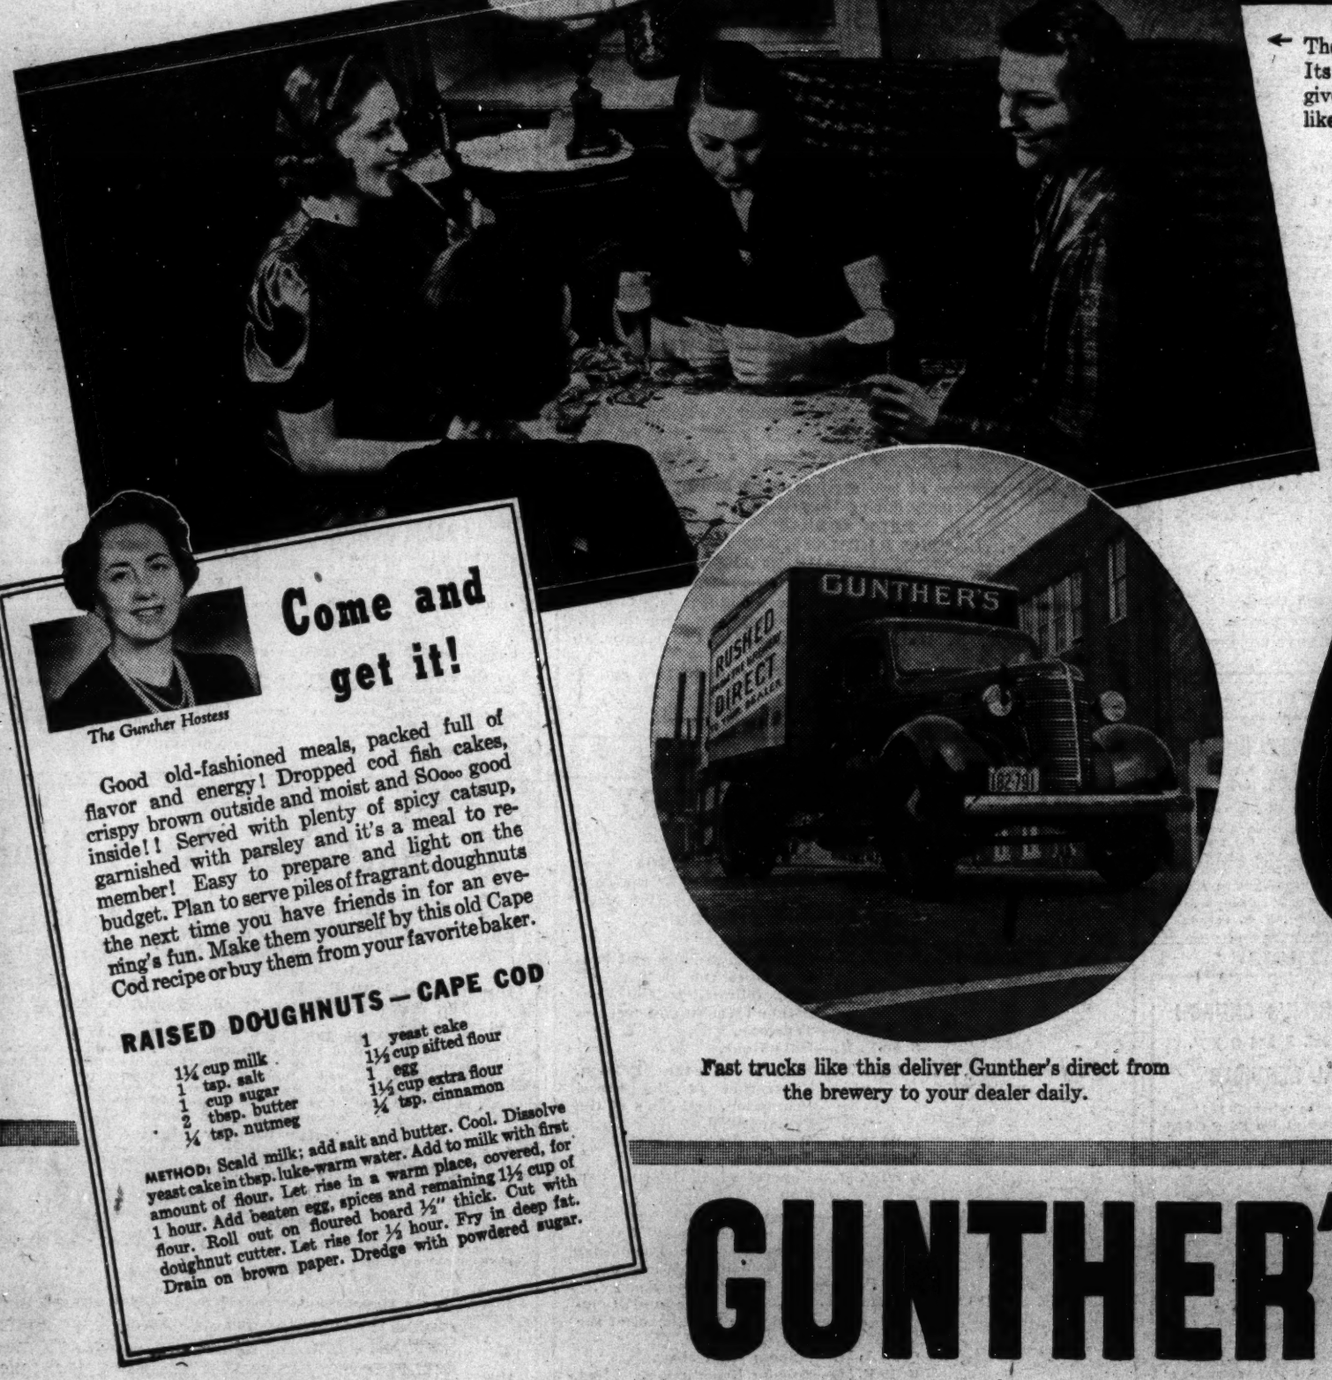
← The ladies go for Gunther's, too. Its dry, beer-y flavor doesn't give them that "filled-up" feeling like sweeter, heavier type beers.

Beer served in a pitcher often gets flat, if left standing for any length of time... so now many smart hostesses serve the attractive Gunther bottle right at their most formal dinner tables, and never worry about flat, stale beer!



The Gunther Hostess

Come and get it!

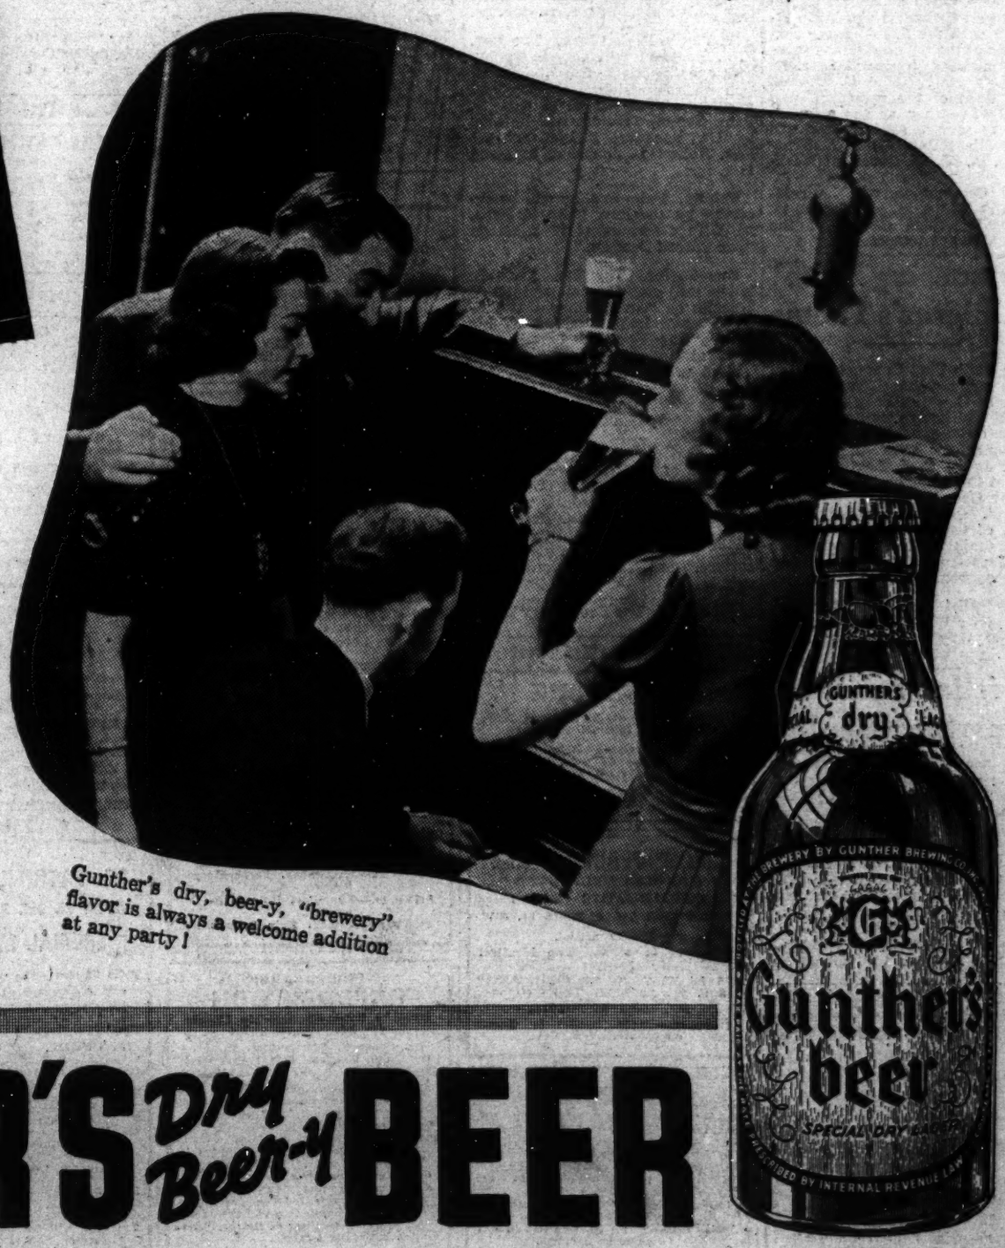
Good old-fashioned meals, packed full of flavor and energy! Dropped cod fish cakes, crispy brown outside and moist and SOooo good inside!! Served with plenty of spicy catsup, garnished with parsley and it's a meal to remember! Easy to prepare and light on the budget. Plan to serve piles of fragrant doughnuts the next time you have friends in for an evening's fun. Make them yourself by this old Cape Cod recipe or buy them from your favorite baker.

RAISED DOUGHNUTS — CAPE COD

1¼ cup milk	1 yeast cake
1 tsp. salt	1½ cup sifted flour
1 cup sugar	1 egg
2 tbsp. butter	1½ cup extra flour
¼ tsp. nutmeg	¼ tsp. cinnamon

METHOD: Scald milk; add salt and butter. Cool. Dissolve yeast cake in tbsp. luke-warm water. Add to milk with first amount of flour. Let rise in a warm place, covered, for 1 hour. Add beaten egg, spices and remaining 1½ cup of flour. Roll out on floured board ½" thick. Cut with doughnut cutter. Let rise for ½ hour. Fry in deep fat. Drain on brown paper. Dredge with powdered sugar.

Fast trucks like this deliver Gunther's direct from the brewery to your dealer daily.



Gunther's dry, beer-y, "brewery" flavor is always a welcome addition at any party!

Washington Churches Prepare Traditional Palm Sunday Music

'Palms,' by Jean Baptiste Faure; 'Seven Last Words,' 'From Olivet to Calvary' Are Among Works to Be Heard Tomorrow.

Washington churches, celebrating tomorrow one of the major events of their year, Palm Sunday, will reverberate to the measured rhythms of music that through the years has become traditionally associated with this particular day.

Such compositions are Jean Baptiste Faure's haunting "Palms"; or the DuBois arrangement of "The Seven Last Words;" "From Olivet to Calvary," by Maunder, and "Ride On, Ride On in Majesty," by John P. Scott.

Cathedral Choir.

The men's and boys' choir of Washington Cathedral (Episcopal), under Robert C. Barrow, will render "When Over the Stepp of Olivet," by Maunder, at the morning service, and at evensong "Ride On in Majesty," by Candlyn.

At Metropolitan Memorial Methodist Church the choir, under Robert F. Freund, will render the benedictus from the "St. Cecelia Mass," by Gounod, and "Fling Wide the Gates" from the cantata "The Crucifixion," by John Stainer. "Open the Gates of the Temple," by Knignt, will be sung by John M. Wilson.

At the morning service at Lewis Memorial Church Miss Betty Duncan will sing "Were You There," by Burleigh. In the evening the choir will render "Jerusalem" and the "Palms." Soloists will include Margaret Carothers, Betty Duncan, Ruth Trader, Paul Burtis, Arthur Jett, James Reed, Norman Stant, John Wilcox and Donald Weikert.

The choir of Luther Place Memorial Church (Lutheran), will sing "The Seven Last Words" at 8 p. m., under Mrs. Cornelia Long Kinsella. Soloists will include Mrs. George J. Chaillet, Mrs. Mitchell A. Marques, Paul Ledig, Harry Yeide and Charles Whitten. The offertory solo, "Sheep and Lambs," will be sung by Mrs. Marques.

Estelle Wentworth Directs.

Estelle Wentworth will direct the choir of Douglas Memorial Methodist Church in the morning in "Palms," with Melville Veitch as soloist. Parker's "Jerusalem" will be sung as offertory anthem by the choir, with Marvin Fisher soloing. There will be an organ prelude and postlude

At Peck Memorial Chapel (Presbyterian), Jean Tucker and Joseph Price will perform the "Palms" at the 11 a. m. service. The choir, consisting of Miss Tucker, Evelyn Wakefield, Anna Price, Jennie Collier, Elda Dwyer, Olive Mason, Clara Shorter, Jessie Stratton, Lillian Tucker, Mrs. R. L. Shumate, Mrs. Price, Donald Shackelford and Charles Burkholder will present Parker's "Jerusalem" and Scott's "Ride On, Ride On," as well as several hymns.

At the vesper service at Wesley Methodist Church the choir, under direction of Earl Carbaugh, with Marie Little at the organ, will sing Maunder's cantata, "Pardon, Penitence and Peace." Soloists will be Eleanor Bourdene, Kathryn MacMilian and Livingston Vann, jr.

John Rogers, Jr., to Sing.

At Lincoln Road Methodist Church John L. Rogers, jr., will sing the "Palms" at the morning service, while at night the soloist will be Phebe Stine.

The senior choir at Dumbarton Avenue Methodist Church will present "The Seven Last Words" tomorrow evening and in the morning will sing "Gloria," by Buzzi-Peccia. At this service the intermediate and junior choirs will render an antiphonal chorus of "Song of the Seraphim," by Waghorne.

In the morning at Westminster Memorial Church (Presbyterian), after an organ prelude, "Panis Angelicus," of Cesar Franck, rendered by Mrs. Carrie Byram, the choir will present "Hosanna," by Granier, and "Calvary," by Rodney. Edith Martin and Ernest Kahlert will solo in the former and Mr. Kahlert in the latter.

The cantata, "The Holy City," by Gaul, will be sung by the cathedral choir of John Wesley A. M. E. Church tomorrow night with the junior choir used in antiphonal and echo singing. The two choirs will be directed by Dr. W. Scott Mayo, minister of music.

Youth, Religion to Be Discussed

Dr. James H. Taylor will preach at a special Palm Sunday service for young people tomorrow morning on "Religion and Youth" at Central Presbyterian Church. In the evening he will speak on the message of the prophet Jeremiah.

Covenant-First. "Putting Religion at the Center of Life" will be Dr. Albert J. McCartney's subject at the morning service tomorrow. His series of sermons on the Ten Commandments will be resumed after Easter. The young people's societies will hold a supper and social hour from 6 to 7 p. m. in the chapel.

Gunton Temple. "Behold Thy King!" will be the title of the sermon of Dr. Bernard Braskamp at the 11 a. m. service.

Westminster Church Memorial. The Rev. Harry V. Porter will conduct the morning worship at 11 o'clock, preaching on "Hosannas on Olivet." In the evening at the worship service he will speak on "Evenings with Jesus."

Chevy Chase. The Rev. J. Hillman Hollister, minister, will speak on "Why Hast Thou Forsaken Me?" at the 11 o'clock service.

New York Avenue. The Rev. Peter Marshall, minister, will have for his subject at the 11 a. m. service "The Last Sermon." At 8 o'clock his topic will be "The Dice of Death."

Miss Ernestine Niemeyer, missionary to Colombia, South America, will be honor guest at a tea given by the Christian Endeavor Society at 6 p. m.

The Rev. A. F. Liotard, pastor, will deliver a French sermon on "Hosanna!" at the 4 p. m. service. Harlen Castle will sing.

United Brethren Rites.

Special Palm Sunday services will be held at 11 a. m. and 8 p. m. with observance of Holy Communion, baptism, and reception of new members. The minister, Dr. Simpson B. Daugherty, will speak on "Glad Hosannas," and "The Triumphal Entry." Youth groups will meet for discussion and fellowship at 7 p. m.

MARY HAWORTH'S MAIL

Mother Asks How to Counsel Daughter, Who Scorns Marriage as "Horrible, Disgusting, Sordid Affair."

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am a happily married woman of 40, the mother of a son and daughter. My daughter is my difficulty. She is nearly 18 but appears older in her ways as she is so serious minded. The first 10 years of her life she played with boys rather than girls, due to the locality in which we lived. She has always been able to get along with them better than with girls. She is very athletic, reads all the sports news, goes to all the sporting goods stores rather than to the department stores when down town, wears only mannish sports clothes, and will not use rouge or lipstick to make herself more attractive. But in spite of this she is a rather nice-looking girl.

• • • •

For a little over a year she has been going out, on week-end evenings, with a nice steady boy of 19. Quite often there are several couples that make up a party and practically all of them—as my daughter says—"mush," much to her disgust. Now I am pleased that she feels this way about promiscuous lovemaking, but in talking with her a few days ago I discovered her entire mental attitude is wrong concerning boys, love and marriage.

• • • •

She feels that even holding hands with a boy will lead to wrong doing. She says that she will never let herself go and love anyone, as that would lead to marriage, and she feels that the sex relationship is "a horrible disgusting, sordid affair" that men demand and women have to put up with. Now, being happily married myself, I know that she is wrong and in a few more years my greatest wish for her is a happy marriage and children. But I realize this can never be until she overcomes this feeling she now has. She had a course on this subject in school in connection with her gym work, but it seems only to have intensified her feelings. Now there must be books she could read, or someone she could talk to who would influence her toward normalcy. I will greatly appreciate any suggestions.

PERPLEXED MOTHER.

A Morbid Attitude.

DEAR PERPLEXED MOTHER: I know of no books written specifically for the purpose of correcting morbid adolescent misconcepts of sex. What might make instructive reading for the adult sometimes further confuses the mind of a young person who feels as your daughter does. That is not to say, of course, that there are no such books, and if any readers know of them and care to offer suggestions, they will be published for your guidance.

• • • •

What you should have done when confronted with such a disturbing statement of attitude toward matters sexual, instead of waiting to find the proper book or person to instruct your daughter, was to have told her, with spirited kindliness, that the fault is in her thinking, not in nature; that a man's and woman's love for each other, when tenderly, sincerely, normally and fully expressed, is the highest form of human co-operation; that the sexual embrace, rightly understood, is a sacrament in the sense that it is an outward symbol of the husband's and wife's spiritual and psychic oneness.

• • • •

You should have taken all the time necessary, then and there, to retrace with her the distorted thought processes and misleading social experiences which had brought her to such frustrating convictions. Your attitude should have been one of unembarrassed wisdom and quiet, friendly, patient interest; shot through, perhaps, with a touch of humorous surprise at her childishly erroneous assumptions. I daresay you felt as through you, and all human beings who have loved and mated, were on the defensive, with nothing to say in extenuation of themselves and nature's program for propagation.

• • • •

Such a reaction on the part of parents and, indeed, of all adults who find themselves articulately inadequate when the so-called facts of life are brought up for discussion by children or adolescents is largely due, I think, to the grown-up's failure to, fully understand what his own attitude is toward sex. He has not stopped, anywhere along the line of his evolution as a social being, to assess the spiritual, ethical, psychic and social values of matehood in its most intimate sense, and in its application to life in its broadest sense. His own sense of well-being — physically, socially, psychically—supposing he is happily mated, may convince him that it is profoundly wholesome, but he hasn't thought the thing through sufficiently to be able to transmit his emotional recognition of this fact to another who seeks, academically, that knowledge which is not yet his through normally unfolding experiences.

• • • •

The key to your daughter's regrettably and obstinately inhibitory attitude toward "boys, love and marriage" will be found, no doubt, in her early association "with boys rather than girls." Either she was shamed, disgraced and affronted, in her own mind and conscience, by a furtive erotic episode in childhood (as a result, perhaps, of thoughtlessly unchaperoned comradeship with boys) or she was made to feel, in her association with boys, that the female of the species is inferior and to be despised on general principles. All of us know the small boy's air of superiority—taunting or condescending—to the pig-tailed tag-along in petticoats.

• • • •

In any event, her present reaction is recognizable as "protest psychology:" protest against what she deems to be woman's shamed subservience to man. Students of human behavior tell us this protest takes two forms: "rebel psychology," in which women imitate men and masculinity to the limits of their physiological capacity; and "slave psychology," in which they demonstrate their weakness and dependency and play the "clinging vine" role. "In both cases," writes one well-known psychiatrist, "the masculine woman and the 'clinging vine' women overrate masculinity and under-rate feminity, the one by the flattery of imitation (as in your daughter's case), the other by the indirect flattery of helplessness based on the alleged greater independence and resourcefulness of the male."

• • • •

"Fear and ignorance," this same authority tells us, . . . "preclude adequate (social or emotional) relations between the sexes. It is impossible for a woman who has been trained to believe that 'men are just out for what they can get,' to surrender herself to her husband without believing that she has also surrendered the best of her personality and become a slave . . . The very words we employ to describe sexual relations clearly indicate the power motive behind much of our sexual behavior. Men 'fall' for a woman's charms. Women 'succumb' to a man's 'line.' To 'make' a woman is typical jargon for a sexual conquest . . ."

• • • •

I think you can only spiritedly challenge your daughter's morbid attitude for what it is; show her that it is based on fear and ignorance, as it is; and warn her, with all the vigor and intelligence at your command, that her hopes of future happiness and mature self-development depend upon correcting that attitude through her own efforts. Today, she is skirting the ragged edges of those various fields of emotional abnormality and subnormality which lie, like quicksands, in wait for the person who hasn't the courage and wisdom to treat, clean-mindedly and open-handedly, with reality. The road to mental, spiritual and emotional hygiene, for her, is the road of scientific knowledge. Her first step toward normalcy must be the recognition of error in her own thought and feeling; the second, a desire to correct this, and third, the adventure of learning, through study and social application, "what it's all about," as we say in the vernacular.

• • • •

Dr. Elmer Klein, of the Washington Life Adjustment Center, could suggest a course of reading for her, no doubt; as could the family physician, or a representative of the Readers' Advisory Service of the public library, or someone at the Library of Congress. Dr. W. Beran Wolfe's "How to Be Happy Though Human" (from which I have quoted above), and Floyd Dell's "Love in the Machine Age," offer practical enlightment to the adult along this line. M. H.

Fur on Shoes Passes Novelty Stage in Paris

Paris (U.P.).—Fur on shoes has gone beyond the novelty stage in Paris, and bootiers are constantly thinking up new ways in which it may be introduced in sports shoes.

An ankle-height boot at Pinet is designed in light suede with a wide tongue of fur. Three straps of deep brown leather are arranged diagonally from beneath the heel to cross on the instep fastening.

Television Spells End of Avoirdupois; Singers Today Must Be Streamlined

Mme. Bovy Advocates Swimming to Develop Beauty of Figure.

Also Rides a Watercycle and Practices Swedish Gymnastics.

By Ida Jean Kain.

IT TAKES SOMEONE who cannot speak the technical language to make television seem as real as the old horsehair sofa and stereopticon slides. Mme. Bovy, the opera singer—and a beauty, by the way—has been a television enthusiast ever since she was invited to make the first test in France. After talking with her we expect any day to be able to turn a dial and see the world perform.

When that happens, Mme. Bovy predicts, we are going to be more weight and figure conscious than ever, because television is like a close-up on the screen. But don't think for a minute that the opera singers will be unable to hold their own in this new field.

Mme. Bovy, blonde and streamlined, is an excellent representative of the new order of opera stars. They learned several years ago that "a great deal of weight is not the bulwark of a powerful voice. On the contrary, it causes shortness of breath! Today most of the singers are streamlined."

Singers Often Tempted.

And if you think you have a struggle to keep your weight down, just listen to this: "The opera singer is constantly being invited to parties where delicious food is served," Mme. Bovy says, "so that she could easily eat twice as often as much as the average person. In the old days a singer would let herself take on too much weight and then all at once she would try to reduce. Of course, the drastic reduction affected her health and voice and she would decide it was better to be fat. Now, when a singer has reason to suspect she might take on weight, she immediately cuts down on food. Only the comic figure is big and fat."

This internationally popular star is so radiantly healthy and so tireless that last year at the Metropolitan she set a new endurance record by singing four roles in "The Tales of Hoffman." No star has ever sung so many.

She Swims and Skis.

Singing is not the only endurance test for Mme. Bovy. During her holidays on the Riviera she swims for hours every day, rides a watercycle and then, for a change, goes over into Italy for some skiing. But swimming is her favorite recreation and she recommends it heartily for beautifying the figure.

As you might point out, it is not always possible to swim, and for those times Mme. Bovy depends on a set of Swedish gymnastics, a sample of which follows: Stand with the feet slightly apart, arms held straight out in front of the body, chest-level and fists clenched. With vigorous movements from the shoulders, cross the clenched fists, alternating right and left, over each other. Work up to 50 counts. This is a very good exercise for the poitrine (chest plate)," Mme. Bovy says.

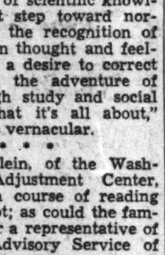
A WOMAN'S NEW YORK

By Alice Hughes

New York, April 8.

NEVER GET the idea that all our women go to business, smirk in stylish restaurants or even tend Junior. A really astonishing number of them paint, and I don't mean faces nor crockery. Hundreds grab little brushes and daub away at large hunks of canvas. Some youngsters do it down in Greenwich Village, learning art the hard way on a few shillings a week. Others do it because it satisfies the creative urge that itches everyone at times, and also because it passes the time.



ALICE HUGHES

There have been a couple of interesting exhibitions by feminine daubers here of late. One was notable not so much for the 50 pictures hung as because of the artist herself—probably the most beautiful girl who ever put brush to palette. Her name is Karin Leyden, a Hollander whose husband also paints. So here she was, blondely lovely in the Dutch tradition, showing her little pictures. I have an idea, however, that most of the men came to witness the artist rather than her masterpieces.

The other showing was of the "subconscious paintings" by the rich and social Mrs. Irving T. Bush. Her work is wild and weird, to the laveye like mine, and I am certain that Mrs. Bush's fantasies are a boon to the paint industry, whatever the poo-bahs of art may think. She has developed a relief technique in flower paintings which sometimes lays the color on half an inch thick, making the petals look as though they were molded.

• • • •

Oh yes, we have hundreds of lady painters here. None of them will ever be called "an old mistress," in generations to come, but it's creative and it's serious work and it takes up those long sunny mornings before lunch at the colony.

• • • •

GIRL ABOUT TOWN—All right, pin on the old polk bonnet and rush over. This is the precise time of year to see New York at its most beautiful and exciting. Early in April it is easy to believe that every wondrous thing ever heard about this fabulous place is not only true, but understated! Fifth Avenue is at its most thrilling, and so is every other alley, so hurry along!

• • • •

I hear that the Grand Duchess Marie, our top Russian exile, has switched from writing to photography, and will soon get out a big book of pictures snapped on her recent travels. I can't discover whether she is in trade at the minute, but she probably is, for even Grand Duchesses must have an occasional scoop of caviar.

• • • •

The indefatigable Mrs. James Roosevelt never shows the slightest sign of slowing down. She's still the guest of honor at innumerable dinners, and is always asked to snip the ribbons that open a fair or something. Her spirit and strength are amazing—the mother of matriarchs, the super Queen Mary of our Republic!

• • • •

A dress designer named Vera Adrienne, who toils at her art here, has no collection of clothes to show seasonally. That's because she designs for individuals strictly, according to their faces, figures and temperaments. And makes a good thing of it, too, since her fees are stiffish. And, of course, what I like is that there's one less fashion show to stare at. We reporters need more Veras!

Wooden 'Silent Butlers' (WhatAreThey?) Stylish

With summer in the offing, wooden items for entertaining and use in the home are definitely a "must." Among the new gadgets which will be seen in wood are salad bowls, with either rope handles, skillet handles, or wooden handles reversed. Silent butlers, a receptacle for all your ashes from your ash trays, are also in wood, and are fireproofed so no stray spark can cause a blaze. Wooden trays for summer serving are numerous, either in natural wood, gay colored to match new glassware, or decorated with appliqued wooden designs in a variety of woods.

The GENTLER SEX

By Malvina Lindsay.

These Spoiled Women.

IF I HEAR of another visiting foreigner's complaining that American women are spoiled, I shall have to exercise my feminine prerogative to scream—long, loud and lustily.

The latest "observer" is Haruko Ichikawa, Japanese woman novelist, who after a four months' tour of the Nation has concluded that the United States is a "woman's country," and that because of the proudness and arrogance of the American woman, it is "too bad to be an American man."

Only last week an expatriated Russian nobleman said virtually the same thing to me. The American women were the most beautiful in the world, he admitted, and the most intelligent and the most this, that and the other, but——

Well, they were just too independent, too high-handed, too . . . too . . . lacking in femininity. The men were too good to them, spoiled them, slaved for them, etc., etc. . . . It is all tooo familiar to repeat.

• • • •

Paging the Amazons.

AS ONE who has never been a 105 per cent flag-waving American, who has never held that one American could whip ten foreigners—or even two—I nevertheless rise now indignantly to demand that the promulgators of this bewhiskered theory of "spoiled" American womanhood produce proof or shut up.

Where, may I inquire, are all these proud, arrogant self-centered Amazons?

Perhaps they are those myriads of suburban wives who rise and prepare breakfast while their husbands sleep; who, if they own a car, chauffeur their men to office or bus line; who come home and wash dishes and sweep and clean and make beds and get the children off to school; who go to market and haggle for vegetables so their families will have the right vitamins; who come home and get lunch for the children; who mend clothes and make dresses and hang curtains and answer telephones and make garden and start dinner and go for their husbands and cook and wash dishes again; who help the children with their home work or their games and who get them off to bed and then relax in the chair nobody else wants while papa sits in state under the reading lamp with his unrumpled paper listening to his favorite radio program or explaining the political situation.

• • • •

Human Chameleons.

OR PERHAPS they are those numerous ambitious women who, like the chameleon on the piece of plaid goods, nearly burst open trying to be at one and the same time their husband's cook, valet, chore boy, banker, captivating mistress, intelligent comrade, cheer leader, entertainer, audience, clinging vine, rock of refuge, understanding mamma, or whatever his mood of the moment may require.

Or again they may be those legions of women who diet and stretch and bend and massage and cold cream constantly so they will have the figures and faces to hold husbands and sweethearts; who study indefatigably the present deluge of books on "What Men Like" and who never ask the wrong question or say the untactful thing; who listen and smirk and nod and agree with amiability and adoration of an Oriental slave girl; who wash and iron and sew and bargain hunt and even go hungry so they will have the nifty clothes that will bring them an approving masculine glance.

Or maybe they are those hard-boiled women in offices who bite their tongues and stifle their opinions and "yes" all masculine ideas, and accept graciously all the detail and routine, and smile sweetly when asked how to spell words or to lend a masculine colleague a dollar until pay day, and who keep reciting endlessly under their breath the "I-must-co-operate-with-men" canon from the business woman's catalogue.

• • • •

Pampered Wives.

OR POSSIBLY they are those working wives who jump out of bed to the clang of an alarm clock to prepare breakfast and be out of the bathroom before hubby awakes; who rush off with him to work; who come home tired at night to leap again into a cook apron and get dinner; who wash dishes and straighten the kitchenette and get everything ready for morning and then settle down to a nice restful evening of mending socks and shirts and slips or of washing out a few "little things."

Or they may be those millions of unmarried women who are supporting fathers and mothers and younger brothers and sisters, and educating nieces and nephews and paying off mortgages and taxes and struggling desperately to keep up their annuities so they will avoid the old ladies' home when they are thrown out of the business world.

Well, whoever they are, let's have some more specific information about them. Let's have their names and their initials and their addresses. And the addresses must NOT be Park avenue, New York.

Traffic-Light Decoration.

Paris (AP).—Silk pique and grosgrain make smart spring hats. Among the new colors are traffic-light red, green.

Paris Evenings Flowery.

Paris (AP).—Fans and purses are catching the overflow of evening flowers. Printed organdie fans matching frocks have the same flower trimming. Fabric purses in small melon shapes have bunches of flowers tucked in at the top, voilets or sweet peas or button roses, the flowers repeated on the dress, the bag fabric echoing the evening coat material.

Beige, Navy Blue Are Basic Colors For Spring Coats

"A woman buying a spring coat should give the subject as much thought as a designer does when he creates one," says Orry-Kelly, Warner Brothers' designer.

"First of all, she should consider the color. What is most becoming to her and what will harmonize with the largest number of popular accessory colors? If she can have two coats, beige and navy blue would be a wise choice. Black, brown and shades of tan will harmonize with beige, while grays, wines and all of the pastels are lovely with navy. Both of these basic colors are leaders this spring.

"Next she should consider the general silhouette. If she is tall, the two-third length boxy types should be good on her. If a girl is below normal height, she would do well to choose a moderately slim seven-eighths length model or a fitted full-length. However the more popular coats are not quite dress length.

"Fabric is the next thought. For sports or town wear she should turn to the rougher materials, such as tweeds and nubby wools, or the polo cloths. For dressier occasions the spongey fabrics are important as well as wool crepes

"As for dressmaker detail, the chic woman will notice these things about current spring coats . . . Few of them have buttons . . . Few of them have collars . . . Many have unpressed lapels . . . Many have front tuxedo revers of fur or fabric . . . Some have bracelet-length sleeves . . ."

'Little Guns' Of Navy Hold Junior Dance

Gloria Gudger Fetes 18 Before Affair at the Sail Loft.

By Elizabeth Ford.

The "little guns" of the Navy took over the spotlight last evening when they floated over the well-polished floor of the Sail Loft at the Navy Junior Dance.

This is the second time this season that the future admirals have strutted across the social stage. The first time was at Christmas.

By eight-thirty the older set" had disappeared to back seats in the boxes while the sub-debs and their escorts struck off to the opening bars of the Navy Orchestra. In the receiving line for the affair were Lieut. Commander H. F. Cope in charge of arrangements, and Mrs. Cope. They were aided by Lieut. D. F. Coffee, U. S. N. and Mrs. Coffee who also did their share of official handshaking for the party.

However, long before the orchestra snapped to attention, there was plenty of festivity scattered all over the Yard. Glocia Gudger, who last evening was star of her family instead of her sister, Elinor Gudger, had 18 of her friends in for dinner.

Several Dinners Precede the Dance

Over at Col. Lowery Stephenson's (U. S. M. C.), his son, David C. Stephenson, was doing a little feting. His guests for dinner were Margaret Boteler, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Basil Boteler; Alice Nicholson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Llewellyn Nicholson; Henrietta de Sieyes, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Jacques de Sieyes; Miss Ann Wotherspoon, daughter of Commander Alexander S. Wotherspoon and Mrs. Wotherspoon; and Miss Cecilia Goodier, niece of Capt. A. J. Toulon, U. S. N., and Mrs. Toulon. The beaus were Taylor Chewning, jr., Ernest Lee, son of Mrs. Harry Lee and the late General Lee, U. S. M. C.; Charles Thomas, jr., and Eugene Smith.

But that wasn't all. Miss Ruth Ruddock, daughter of Comdr. T. D. Ruddock, jr., and Mrs. Ruddock, was another dinner hostess. Her guests were Jane Ducey, daugh of Capt. David F. Ducey, U. S. N., and Mrs. Ducey; Katherine Roper, Hope Nester, John Barrows, Dill Wotherspoon, Scotty Elbright and Bud Wells.

Minister Konitza Wins 'Top Hat' Award

Judge Magazine, a publication which for years has made its living and reputation by being constantly in a "cap-and-bells" mood, sobered down this week to offer what it calls its High Hat award for April.

The medal goes to "His Excellency Faik Konitza, diplomat, sportsman, connoisseur, Minister of Albania to the United States."

The citation, in part, reads. "For having represented his Balkan kingdom well and delightfully for the past 12 years; for having exhibited an understanding of values, both human and political; for his splendid sportsmanship; for his great and fine loyalty to his King, and for his many and unsung generosities.

When Mr. Konitza journeys up to New York the end of the month to receive his award, he will take his place with fellow-medalists who include Howard Hughes, J. Edgar Hoover, Thomas E. Dewey, Col. Charles A. Lindbergh, Franklin D. Roosevelt, Stephen Early, George M. Cohan, Alfred M. Landon.

Parents to Visit The Engelharts

Mr. and Mrs. Otto Engelhart will have as their guests in their home in Wesley Heights over the week-end, Mrs. Englehart's father and mother, Mr. and Mrs. G. G. Kerfoot, of Brazil, Ind.

Accompanying them will be Otto Englehart, jr., on his spring vacation from Indiana University, and the Misses Edith and Betty Moore, friends of Miss Lucia Englehart, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Englehart.

"The party must go on." At least that's what good hostess Mme. van Troostenburg de Bruyn decided yesterday afternoon when Miss Lya Florescu, who was to have been the guest of hondr at her cocktail fete, was at the last minute unable to attend because of illness.

The Secretary of the Netherlands Legation and Mme. van Troostenburg de Bruyn knew Miss Florescu when they were stationed in Bucharest.

Chevy Chase College Plans Show April 11

Students of Chevy Chase Junior College on Connecticut avenue have been working for weeks to make their spring musical comedy "Tune In" a success. When it goes on the boards Monday evening, April 11, Miss Martha Le Fevre, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Le Ferve, will have one of the leading roles.

Miss Mary Costa, also of Chevy Chase, Md. will be one of those taking part in the special dances of the show.

The book is by Edward Bradley while the music is by Don Wilson. Production is under the direction of Maurice Greet and Miss Lillian W. Smith.

Mrs. Frederic E. Farrington, regent of the Chevy Chase Junior College, who wrote the school's annual "Chevy Chase Frolics" for a number of years, is now on a round-the-world tour.

Cancels Trip.

The Ambassador of France, Count Rene Doynel de Saint Quentin, has canceled a proposed trip to New Orleans and will remain in Washington. He was to have gone there to open a French house at the University of Louisiana.

Cocktail Party To Follow Hunt Meeting Today

The Sandersons to Entertain After Trials at Bradley Farms.

Nothing less than a flood will cause postponement of the hunter trials scheduled for today at Bradly Farms. The only concession to be made to the weather will be this: if it is still pouring at 11:30 a. m., the time the show begins, the Junior class, which is scheduled to lead off the program, will be postponed to later in the day, and the Chevy Chase class will be held first.

Following the meeting there will be a cocktail party at which hosts will be Mr. and Mrs. Fred R. Sanderson (the former is M. F. H. of the Riding and Hunt Club hounds); Dr. James N. Greer, secretary, and Mrs. Greer. The exhibitors of classes and a number of friends who will attend the event have been invited. The party will be held in the Sanderson home, Kenwood, 201 Chamberlain avenue.

Among the many who will participate in the trials are Gen. Leon Kromer, former chief of cavalry; Mrs. Thomas C. Hart and her daughter, Miss Isabella Hart; Fenton Fadeley, Mr. and Mrs. Marshall Exnicios, John Paulding Brown, Lieut. Hubert Chandler, Carlton Eacho, Dr. Joseph Horgan, Miss Elizabeth Jackson, Mrs. John L. Landis, Lieut. Comdr. William Justice Lee, Dr. Robert E. Moran and Mrs. Eugene Carusi.

The Counselor of the Cuban Embassy and Senora de Baron entertained at luncheon yesterday at the Mayflower.

Guests were Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Schlatter, Miss Olga Patterson, Miss Marta Trucco, Dr. Roberto G. de Mendoza, First Secretary of the Cuban Embassy; Michael Budny, attache of the Polish Embassy, and Jose Maria de Lasa, attache of the Cuban Embassy.

Mr. Culbertson On Parish Hour

William S. Culbertson, former United States Minister to Rumania, will speak on "The Orthodox Church in Rumania" as the fifth in a series of talks inaugurated by Dr. John F. B. Carruthers in the National Open Parish Hour at the Covenant-First Presbyterian Church tomorrow at 8 p. m.

The Minister of Greece, Demetrios Sicilianos, and George Boncesco, financial counselor of the Rumanian Legation, will be honor guests of the evening. Dr. Cloyd Heck Marvin, president of George Washington University, will introduce the speaker.

Dr. Carruthers, who has been in Washington several months, was associated with Dr. Rufus von Kleinschmidt, president of the University of Southern California, and prior to that taught at Lafayette College, Easton, Pa.

Dr. Fraga to Bring 2 Nieces Here to Reside With Him

The Cuban Ambassador, Dr. Pedro Martinez Fraga, left yesterday for Miami, where he will be guest at a banquet to be given by the Pan American League. When he returns to Washington Monday he will be accompanied by his two nieces, Senoritas Anna Maria and Esther Carabia, who will make their home with him.

The Ambassador will go to New York Tuesday, returning to Washington that evening.

* * * *

Jacques Dumaine, first secretary of the French embassy, will entertain at a small luncheon Tuesday in his apartment on Massachusetts avenue, which he leased from Mrs. Matthew E. Hanna.

Gen. Patterson Guest Of Dr. and Mrs. Davis

Dr. and Mrs. William Thornwald Davis have as their guest for the week-end Gen. Robert U. Patterson, former Surgeon General of the Army, and Washington resident. Gen. Patterson now is dean of medicine at the University of Oklahoma.

His daughter, Mrs. Patterson Roberts, is a resident of Washington.

Back in Washington

Hessler Studio.

Mrs. Richard B. Griffin, who with her husband has returned to Washington and is staying at the Wardman Park Hotel until they open their home on Kalorama road. Mrs. Griffin is the former Miss Victoire Conley whose wedding to Mr. Griffin, son of Mrs. Paul Bastedo, took place late in January.

About The Town

With Dudley Harmon

AFTER tentatively venturing forth a short while ago in spring pastels of pink and baby blue, and modish hats trimmed with lilies of the valley and other such pastoral notes, the feminine half of Washington society has gone shuddering back to heavy tweeds and dark winter colors.

DUDLEY HARMON

There wasn't a spring bonnet in a roomful yesterday at luncheon time at the 1925 F Street Club. The only bright spot was the glassware and table silver, which, incidentally, owes all that glitter and sheen to being brushed, not rubbed, daily.

* * * *

LUNCHING TOGETHER was a small group which included Mrs. Hamilton Fish, the hostess; Mme. Prochnik, Mme. Otto Wadsted, wife of the Danish Minister, and Mrs. Ingalls Sard. Both Mrs. Sard and Mrs. Fish were in conservative navy blue, while the wife of the former Austrian Minister wore a heavy knitted coat of black and white wool. Mme. Wadsted's outfit shouted Paris—a black silk frock with a three-quarter length cape of the same material trimmed down the front with silver fox.

Miss Marian Trumbull, wearing a gray suit with hat to match, was lunching with Mrs. Marion Warburg, in a yellow sweater and brown wool skirt, and another tweed-outfitted friend.

The chatelaine of the club, Mrs. James F. Curtis, is expected to return the first of the week from New York, where she went for the wedding of her son, James, to Hope Gatins.

* * * *

THE Austrian envoy and Mme. Prochnik will celebrate Easter in the legation house for the last time. Shortly after the holiday they will move into the small house which they have leased at 1813 Twenty-fourth street, where among their neighbors will be the John Caswells and the Edward Pavenstedts. Although he has settled the housing problem, the former Minister does not yet know what his status is going to be under the anschluss.

* * * *

IF EASTER week in Washington isn't gay, it won't be the fault of Clarence Hewes. This popular bachelor has a succession of house guests lined up who should provide an agreeable excuse for a lot of entertaining.

The first contingent of visitors —Mr. and Mrs. Hugh E. Vincent, of New Orleans—will arrive on Monday, April 18, and that evening Mr. Hewes will entertain for them at dinner. Mr. Vincent is a member of the Advisory Board of the Inland Waterways Commission, and both he and his wife visited "Buzzy" last year.

On Thursday, April 21, Mrs. Harry McCall and Miss Dorothy Spencer, whose address is also New Orleans, will arrive to stay with Mr. Hewes. Mrs. McCall, the former Lelia Kennard, is a niece of the late Walter Denegre, of Washington. Miss Spencer, who is en route to London to spend the season, was once queen of the fashionable Comus Ball, which takes place every year in New Orleans at Mardi Gras. They will be here five days and Mr. Hewes will give a dinner for them the evening of their arrival.

* * * *

THE STUNT PARTY to be held at the Garden Playhouse of Mrs Harold Walker has been off again and on again all winter, but now is definitely set for the middle of May. Hosts will be Mrs. Walker's son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence Wood Robert, jr., and already plans are afoot for some amateur theatricals. The affair was originally planned for earlier in the season, but the Roberts' several trips to Palm Beach obliged its postponement. Members of Capital society who have always had a secret hankering after greasepaint are looking forward to this party with a great deal of interest.

* * * *

A NUMBER of dinners were given last evening before the Friday Supper Club at the Sulgrave, but none was merrier than that at which Mrs. Gilbert Hitchcock was hostess. Guests of honor were the Misses Sarah and Blanche Crump, of Memphis, Tenn., who are visiting her.

Others in the party which went on later to dance were Mr. and Mrs. Mark Sullivan, jr., Miss Eleanor Flood, Graham Claytor, smart young secretary to Justice Brandeis; Mr. and Mrs. Lewis Clark, Harry Covington, Miss Anne Perin and Nathan Bartlett with his house guest, Austin Boyd, also of Memphis.

Soviet Envoy Back.

The Soviet Ambassador, Alexander Troyanovsky, has returned from a sojourn in Florida. Mme. Troyanovsky will join him tomorrow evening. She has also been in Florida.

First Lady Aids Dance Recital For Sweet Briar

College Girls to Perform on April 20 for Benefit of Library Fund.

MRS. ROOSEVELT will head the list of patronesses for the Sweet Briar College dance recital at the Wardman Park Theater, Wednesday evening, April 20. The affair has been arranged for the benefit of the library fund of the college and will be given by the dance and choreography groups of the school, under the direction of Nora Stael, instructor of interpretive dancing at Sweet Briar.

McKinley, Mrs. Albert Lucas, Miss Florence Gildersleeve, Miss Mabel Turner, Mrs. Rozier Dulaney, jr. and Mrs. H. Lee Boatwright, jr.

Mrs. Peyton Evans is general chairman for arrangements. Other members of the committee are Miss Ellen Lee Snodgrass, Miss Capel Grimes, Miss Dorothy Green, Mrs. J. Clifton Woodrum, Mrs. William B. Sims and many others.

Fairfax Show To Be Biggest

Bigger than ever will be the annual horse show of the Fairfax Hunt, April 29 and 30 at the Horse Show Grounds in Fairfax, Va.

The hunt, organized only a few years ago, has grown steadily in membership, and chances are before long it may have a clubhouse. The Fairfax Hunt shows are always gay, and attended by throngs from all over Maryland and Virginia as well as Washington.

Mrs. Hugh S. Cumming, jr., is chairman of the general women's committee for the show, and has selected a group of assistants who will have charge of ringside parking, boxes, refreshments, and trophies.

Assisting Mrs. Cumming will be Miss Florence Harris, Mrs. John Pugh, Mrs. Louis Jeffries, Mrs. Charles P. Howze, Mrs. H. Lee Boatwright, jr., Miss Helen Davis, Mrs. Irving Brotman, Mrs. John Meade, Mrs. John G. Pollard, jr., Mrs. R. F. Wilson, Mrs. Robert W. Wilson, Mrs. Arthur Godfrey, Mrs. Arch MacDonald, Mrs. Tom DeLashmutt, Mrs. H. Stewart McDonald, jr., Mrs. Roger Robb, Mrs. U. S. Randle, Mrs. Robert Graham, Mrs. W. Laird Dunlop 3d, Mrs. Henri Luebbermann, Mrs. Edmund Parry, Mrs. Beverly Coleman, Mrs. John Aken, Mrs. Edmund Horgan, Mrs. Reed Thomas, and Mrs. Mills Astin.

Twenty-five classes are listed for this year with trophies or prizes and ribbons for each class. Judges will be Manley W. Carter, Mrs. Frederick Van Lennep, and A. W. Ward.

Thomas N. DeLashmutt is chairman of the horse show committee, and Robert W. Wilson is secretary and treasurer. Other members include George Benoit, George Rothwell Brown, William Laird Dunlop 3d., Miss Christine Ekengren, Robert D. Graham, H. Stewart McDonald, jr., and Robert T. Pell.

Calvin Kephatts Attend Fete in Philadelphia

Lieut. Col. and Mrs. Calvin Kephart, of Lyon Park, Arlington County, drove to Philadelphia yesterday to attend the tercentenary dinner given last night at the Benjamin Franklin Hotel by the State of Pennsylvania and the Swedish Colonial Society in celebration of the earliest colonial settlements in the States by the Swedes in 1638.

Col. and Mrs. Kephart were accompanied by Mrs. Charles B. Kephart, wife of the members of the Maryland House of Delegates from Taneytown. The party will return tomorrow evening.

Party Given In Farewell To Mrs. Coon

Past President of Takoma Park Woman's Club Leaves for Coast.

By Jessie Ash Arndt,
The Post Club Editor.

Mrs. Byron M. Coon, past president of the Takoma Park Woman's Club and for 15 years a member of its executive board, yesterday afternoon was honored by the membership at a farewell party in the home of Mrs. John Ramsdell, in Takoma Park. Today, with her daughter, Miss Janet Coon, she will leave by motor for Los Angeles to join Mr. Coon and make her home.

Mrs. Coon has been prominent in club work in Takoma Park ever since going there from Iowa, nearly 15 years ago. She has been chairman of the art department of the Takoma Park Club this year, is a former secretary of Chapter L of the P. E. O. and is an active member of Martha Washington Chapter of the D. A. R. She is also the sponsor of the Junior Woman's Club of Takoma Park.

Many parties have been given for her preceding her departure in addition to that at which she was guest of honor yesterday. The Junior Club entertained for her as did the P. E. O.; Martha Washington Chapter of the D. A. R., at the home of Mrs. Andrew Blunton, and the executive board of the Takoma Park Club.

Stop for Visits On Way West

She and her daughter, who is well known in musical circles as a concert whistler, will make a leisurely trip West, stopping in Oberlin, Ohio, to visit another daughter, Mrs. Erwin Stumm, and Mr. Stumm, who is a member of the faculty of Oberlin College; going from there to Tulsa, Okla. to visit her sister, Miss Clarian Lesher, and then to Los Angeles. Mr. Coon preceded them to assume his duties as regional representative of the Bureau of Internal Revenue, and they expect to be there for from two to five years.

Mrs. Coon was presented yesterday with a book, "Great Works of Art" by Ruckstell inscribed with the signatures of all members present.

She wore a black two-piece suit dress, with a hair-line stripe of white, and a small black silk hat with a straw braid brim and a veil. The hostess also was in a black costume. Mrs. Walter Harman, president, who poured, wore a tailored dress in the new rust shade, trimmed down the front with buttons of the material. Mrs. Frederick L. Pratt, a past president of the club, who was also at the tea table, wore a flowered print frock with a blue background. The table was appointed with a lace cloth, a center bouquet of bridal wreath narcissus and jonquils and lighted with yellow candles in silver holders.

Mrs. Biddle Among Those Attending

Mrs. Lloyd W. Biddle, a member of the Takoma Park Club as well as president of the District of Columbia Federation of Women's Clubs, was among the guests and was wearing a white blouse with a black suit and a small black hat trimmed in white flowers. Others among the 100 guests were Mrs. C. Leavenworth Elliott, of New York and New Hampshire, who spends each winter here; Mrs. C. S. Smith and Mrs. LeBlond Burdette, both charter members of the club, and officers including Mrs. James M. Councillor, executive secretary of the student loan fund; Mrs. G. Fair Is Planned At St. Gertrude's

Members of the Guild of St. Gertrude's School of Arts and Crafts met yesterday morning in the recreation room at the home of Mrs. Joseph Tumulty, 1901 Wyoming avenue, to discuss plans for the Country Fair to be held at the school on Sargent road, Saturday, May 21.

This annual benefit is one of the gayest events of the early summer in Washington.

St. Gertrude's School, the only one of its kind in this section of the country, offers a program of remedial instruction in the fundamental subjects, the children grouped according to achievement level.

Dom Thomas Verner Moore, O. S. B., professor of psychology at Catholic University, associate at the clinic for mental and nervous diseases at Georgetown Medical School, and director of the clinic for mental and nervous diseases at Providence Hospital, founded the school in 1926 and has been director ever since.

Mrs. Robert Whitney Imbrie, president of the guild, presided at the meeting yesterday morning.

North Dakota Club To Meet Tonight

Tonight the members of the North Dakota State Society of Washington will gather at their annual meeting at 2400 Sixteenth street. An informal reception, dinner and dance is being arranged and officers for next year will be elected.

Honor guests include Senator and Mrs. Lynn J. Frazier, Senator and Mrs. Gerald P. Nye, Representative and Mrs. William Lemke and Representative Usher L. Burdick. Howard Houston is coming from New York to speak at the dinner. Mr. Houston spent ten years in Geneva as establishment officer for the League of Nations, following his service with the A. E. F. He is now assistant to the president of the American Cyanamid Co.

Mrs. O. W. McNeese At Democrats' Club

A capacity audience was present at the Woman's National Democratic Club yesterday morning to hear the first of the lectures by Mrs. O. W. McNeese on "Men Who Almost Became President." Several of the women remained for luncheon following the lecture.

The lecture yesterday is the first of a series of four, open to the public, which follow those of last month when Mrs. McNeese discussed presidents of the nineteenth century and their wives.

Among women staying for the luncheon were Mrs. Tilman Parks, Mrs. William Keohan, Miss Pauletta Guffey, Mrs. Huston Thompson, Mrs. Albert Jones, Mrs. L. D. Hawkins, Miss Portia Oberly, Mrs. John B. Gordon, Mrs. Charles Ristine, Mrs. R. H. Hodgson, Mrs. Charles Brand, Mrs. J. P. Buchanan, Mrs. John A. Martin, and Mrs. Allen Phelps.

Mrs. McNeese, who is as entertaining a conversationalist as lecturer, was the center of one of the animated luncheon groups.

The other three of the series will follow each Friday in April at 11 o'clock.

Chevy Chase Women Hear Report on Films

Serials Influence Children Little, Mrs. Uelsmann Tells Civics Unit.

Serials are not the magnets which draw Chevy Chase children to the movies. Mrs. Martin H. Uelsmann, chairman of the motion picture committee of the civics section of the Chevy Chase Woman's Club, yesterday announced findings of a survey conducted among 1,000 school children of the community, showing that only 25 per cent of them attended especially to follow serial pictures.

She presented her report at the final meeting of the Civics Section, held in the assembly room of the Chevy Chase Presbyterian Church, and announced that the manager of a neighborhood theater was co-operating with the committee in experimenting over an eight-week period on programs with the serial eleminated. He is as interested as are the club women to see whether it effects the size of his audiences, Mrs. Uelsmann explained. The serials, she added, are conceded to be unwholesome for children, and to be films which are below the standard of the regular full-length feature.

The business meeting, at which Mrs. Edwin H. Helmuth, leader of the section, presided, also included a report by Mrs. Edwin Hahn on progress of the building fund. Letters were sent out Monday and in four days subscriptions amounting to $1,600 have come in. The committee is elated over the generous response.

Three resolutions from the Maryland State Federation of Women's Clubs, two indorsing the Starnes and Reynolds immigration bills and one opposing the Dies bill, giving discretionary powers in immigration cases to the Secretary of Labor, were tabled for further consideration. They were presented by Mrs. William F. Henry, chairman of resolutions and legislation.

The section had as its guest speaker yesterday and as guest of honor at its luncheon, Miss Janet Richards, who discussed current events, including issues before Congress and the effect of Hitler and Mussolini on affairs in Europe. Miss Richards also spoke of her affection for Chevy Chase, where she lived for many years before moving into the District, and said her father built one of the first houses in the vicinity. At the close of her lecture, she asked for a pledge card, expressing her desire to contribute to the new club building. She was introduced by Mrs. Henry.

G. W. U. to Fete College Dancers In Annual Symposium Today

Groups to Present Expositions of 'Theme and Variations;' Miss Evelyn Davis Will Speak and Lead Open Forum.

College dance groups will gather in their annual symposium today at Pierce Hall at 2:30 as guests of George Washington University. They will present variations of a dance statement decided upon several months ago as an expression of "Theme and Variations," the particular problem they are considering this year.

Groups will participate from American, under the direction of Doris Snodgrass; from Fredericksburg State Teachers College, under the direction of Sarah Rogers; George Washington, under Elizabeth Burtner; Goucher, under Margaret Kyle; Marjorie Webster, under Mrs. Betty Wardwell; Trinity under Elaine Scanlon, and from Wilson Teachers, under Alma Ebeling.

The symposium will open with a presentation of the statement by leaders of the dance groups. Those from local colleges are Ann Aimes, Martha Corcoran, Barbara Feiker, Betty Morse, Betty St. Clair, Marguerite Straucamp, Emily Wall and Zelda Wightman.

Everett Stevens, local composer, who has appeared with the National Symphony, will accompany the presentation with music of his own composition. Two-minute variations of the statement will then be danced by selected girls from each college.

The second part of the program will be presented with all participating on the stage. The variations will be repeated, and Evelyn Davis, of the Evelyn Davis School of Dance, who is guest artist for the occasion, will lead those not engaged in presenting unit veriations in a movement of background design. She will also lead the entire group in a spontaneous conclusion for which Mr. Stevens will improvise an accompaniment.

Participating dancers and those who attended the symposium as observers will then be addressed by Miss Davis and will join in an open forum discussion of dance problems. Tea will be served following the program.

Preceding the symposium, the women's athletic association boards from each school will be entertained at luncheon and a short conference at George Washington. Miss Jenny Turnbull, of George Washington, and Miss Mildred Tapley, Goucher, will speak on "The Value of W. A. A. to the College Campus."

Girls who will dance from local colleges are: From American, Helen Beal, Eleanor Belden, Margery Davis, Catherine Dickey, Dorothy Lastis, Marian Loomis, Betty Morse, Josephine Shepherd; from George Washington, Frances Alex, Bette Burch, Barbara Feiker, Ann Gaither, Ethel Hoffman, Gladys Lagos, Margaret McDowell, Lucy Petta, Isabel Richwine; from Marjorie Webster, Duke Blue, Adele Fertig, Marjorie Hitchens, Agnes Shuttleworth, Betsy Shuttleworth, Gretchen Van de Boa, Emily Wall, Margaret Worrell and Martha Zoll.

From Trinity, Beatrice Carroll, Greta Gardener, Lenore Henelt, Elinor Oliver, Eleanor Prior, Marguerite Straucamp, Mary Garland Tagney and Lenore Henelt; from Maryland, Ann Aimes, Vivian Bono, Martha Corcoran, Lucille Dornman, Estelle Murphy, Alice Nordwall, Betty Raleigh, Betty Ross, Betty St. Clair; from Wilson Teachers, Ellen Artman, Margaret Borger, Ruth Branson, Helen Conard, Mildred Gore, Theodora Lanboros, Yetta Saber, Zelda Wightman and Mary Sue Williams.

Frat Will Initiate.

The Delta Kappa Gamma honorary fraternity will hold its initiation on Wednesday at the Hay-Adams House. The ceremony will be preceded by a dinner at 7 o'clock. The following will be admitted to membership: Miss Helen Appler, Miss Florence Hale, Mrs. Janie Hilder, Mrs. Mary S. Resh and Mrs. Alma M. Shugrue.

Reorganization Is Recommitted By House Vote

Offices

insisted the issue of "confidence" was not involved.

In the last appeal for recommital, O'Connor declared it would be "disastrous to the party and the country in which we live to pass this bill." The New Yorker said "this is the biggest issue I have ever seen."

So close was the voting, that not until Speaker Bankhead announced the final count some minutes after the formal roll call had been completed, was the outcome certain.

Representative O'Connor swiftly moved to prevent a reconsideration of the count that might have changed the result. He moved to reconsider the vote and in the same sentence moved to lay his own motion on the table. By a voice vote the House tumultuously agreed.

Deadening Blow.

It was a deadening blow for the leadership which for two weeks has sought by modifications in the measure and charges of unjustified "propaganda" against it to give the President at least a skeleton of the merger powers he sought.

Technically, the bill has not been defeated. It will go back to the same committee which originally recommended its passage, and it would be in the power of this group to report a new bill, with further concessions to the opposition. It is conceivable that this might yet be done, but Speaker Bankhead himself told the House that recommittal would be tantamount to a death sentence.

It was the second major Administration measure to meet such an end in the House in the last five months. At the tail end of the special session, December 17, the House recommitted the President's wages and hours bill by an 18-vote margin. That measure still is in committee, despite repeated efforts to revive it.

Court Bill Sent Back.

And last summer the Senate sent back the President's court bill to certain committee death after a Nation-wide controversy similar in many respects to that over reorganization.

Eleventh-hour efforts to save the reorganization bill included a post-office patronage bid for House votes offered yesterday as an amendment to civil service provisions of the House bill, with the assent of many of the leaders.

The patronage amendment was offered by Representative Claude A. Fuller (Democrat), of Arkansas, over the opposition of the actual author of the plan, Representative Charles I. Faddis (Democrat), of Pennsylvania.

Purpose of the patronage move was to set aside the President's executive order applying a strict merit selection rule to postmaster appointees, and restore the old system, under which House members claimed a voice in appointments.

The "pap" amendment was adopted 123 to 103 despite charges by Chairman Robert Ramspeck of the House Civil Service Committee of an attempt to "intimidate" and embarrass Faddis and himself and other opponents of the bill.

"You can't control my vote that way," Ramspeck shouted in heat.

"This amendment merely confirms the suspicions I have held right along that this bill seeks to set up a patronage administration instead of a strong Civil Service administration. Your new single Civil Service administrator would be a patronage administrator."

Ramspeck's Charge.

Ramspeck charged the reorganization committee was departing from the original merit recommendations of the President, despite last-minute tightening of the civil service section of the bill with amendments proposed by Representative James M. Mead (Democrat), of New York.

Mead voted the Fuller patronage rider, as did Chairman John J. Cochran, of the reorganization committee, and Representative Frank C. Kniffin (Democrat), of Ohio, another member of the committee in charge. But Majority Leader Rayburn voted for it, as did Representatives Lindsay Warren, of North Carolina, and Fred Vinson, of Kentucky, Democratic reorganization bill draftsmen.

Fights Own Measure.

Faddis, who drew the new postmaster appointment bill, himself took the floor against it, insisting it would be "jeopardized" by inclusion in the reorganization measure.

But the House voted for the Fuller amendment, completely reversing action last year approving the Ramspeck bill placing first, second and third class postmasters on a strict merit basis. Later, Representative Gerald J. Boileau (Progressive), of Wisconsin, demanded a separate vote on the postmaster change. Again it was approved, this time 165 to 106.

Before the recommittal vote O'Connor seized this patronage weapon and attempted to turn it against the bill. He told members that if the reorganization bill is rejected his Rules Committee plans to vote House right-of-way for the Faddis bill next week.

Concessions Made In Vain.

Failure of reorganization in the final test followed two days of seeming leadership triumphs. Thursday the Administration salvaged the merger title of the bill by conceding Congress the right, by majority vote, to stop the President's reorganization orders, and by exempting from change the Bureau of Education and the Veterans Administration.

Yesterday the apparent victories continued, as the House approved six assistants for the President and ratified accounting procedure revamping without change. Provision for a single Civil Service administrator was likewise upheld, after modifying amendments by Representative Mead.

An amendment by Representative Ramspeck, to maintain the present bipartisan three-man Civil Service administration and setup a single Civil Service administrator under its control, was defeated, 115 to 83.

Opposition Submerged.

Three major opposition attempts to modify the auditing and Comptroller changes were made and each was submerged. Under the committee's bill, the Comptroller General would be subject to removal by the President and the Attorney General could rule on his powers.

Representative Francis H. Case (Republican), of South Dakota, sought to make the Comptroller independent of the executive but his amendment was discarded by a voice vote. Representative David D. Terry (Democrat), of Arkansas, moved to make the Comptroller responsible only to Congress, but he lost 98 to 75. And Representative Andrew J. May (Democrat), of Kentucky, tried to strike out the entire title and leave the accounting system as it now is. This amendment was defeated 116 to 93.

Only one minor modification was agreed to by leaders, an amendment by Representative Fred Vinson (Democrat), of Kentucky, giving the Comptroller a 15-year term but still leaving him subject to removal.

A long line of concessions were made on the civil service title of the bill to save it from defeat. Representative Mead, author of the title and chairman of the House Postoffice Committee, took the floor to espouse them.

These modifications, all agreed to by the House, deprived the President of power to "except" Government employes from the classified civil service, but left him authority to extend the merit system to Federal workers now outside that status. They made the proposed part-time Civil Service Advisory Board a bi-partisan body, with no more than 4 of its 7 members to be selected from one party.

As the flow of concessions continued, the proposed Civil Service administrator was voted a 15-year term and made subject to selection from the three highest candidates qualifying by examination, and the President's power to extend Civil Service status to unclassified employes was limited to two years. Another change set up boards of review in the departments to pass on efficiency ratings of employes.

Changes Voted Down.

All changes not approved by the reorganization committee were voted down, including Ramspeck's effort to continue the present Civil Service Committee, proposals to exclude politicians from the Civil Service advisory board, and an attempt to set up three administrators under the commission.

Civil Service was the last title in the bill, but the flurry of amendments continued. There was a futile effort to exempt the Federal Bureau of Investigation from reorganization. Then Representative Hamilton Fish (Republican), of New York, sought to make it the "sense of the House" that President Roosevelt not run for a third term. The Fish thrust was knocked out on a point of order.

The bill was now ready for final action, but Representative Warren sought to extend the time of debate 30 minutes. Opponents objected, but Warren insisted Speaker Bankhead and Leader Rayburn should address the House. The House agreed, when Representative O'Connor also was granted time.

Rayburn was tensely earnest as he appealed to the Democrats to give the President powers he said were no greater than merger authority voted former President Hoover. He said Mr. Roosevelt "will be President for two years and eight months longer," and Democratic members should stand by him.

"In this time when the minds of the people are disturbed," said Rayburn, "I am wondering, if we were to cast a vote of lack of confidence in the present occupant of the White House, if we would not be adding to the doubts and discomforts of the average American. Can we as a party afford to throw this kind of disturbance into the minds of the people?"

O'Connor followed Rayburn with his appeal for recommittal of the measure "for further study." O'Connor said "preservation of the powers of Congress" was the issue and warned members facing the re-election gun next November that "Republicans can be right."

Then Bankhead, in one of those rare moments when a Speaker leaves the rostrum to address the House, strode dramatically to the front. Bankhead advised "calmness" and said "this issue has been magnified far beyond what it deserves." He urged members to "disarticulate" the issue "and pull off the masquerade."

Smiling Victors of Fight Against Reorganization Bill

Public, Leaders Hail Defeat of Reorganization

Comment

this legislation behind us, now is the time to close our ranks and bring out Constitutional legislation such as the tax bill proposed by Senator Pat Harrison and get the country back to work."

Chairman John J. Cochran of the House Reorganization Committee, expressed keen disappointment, and Senator James F. Byrnes (Democrat), South Carolina, sponsor of the bill in the Senate, said nothing.

Thought Nation Wanted It.

"We're very sorry the bill failed to pass because we thought the people of the country, including the businessmen, large and small, wanted such a bill," said Cochran. "There was every indication up to a few weeks ago that this was their wish."

Spokesmen for the Republican Party quickly voiced their elation. From Topeka, Kans., former Governor Alf M. Landon, 1936 Presidential candidate, called the House action "evidence that Congress is resuming its duty of consideration and debate." He said this was "heartening to those who believe popular government rests on legislative government."

Business Encouraged.

"It should also encourage business to come out of its 'fraid hole,' for it is further evidence that no more upsetting experiments will be swallowed at one gulp without the proper consideration and discussion which the American people have a right to expect of the legislative representatives," said Landon.

Senate Minority Leader Charles L. McNary could not repress his delight.

"That's wonderful," McNary said. "It is a very wise decision the House has made."

House Republican Leader Bertrand H. Snell said the vote "reflects the feeling of the people of the country."

"What they want Congress to do is to give some attention to the economic conditions of the country and the relief of unemployment," declared Snell.

Vandenberg Pleased.

Senator Arthur H. Vandenberg (Republican), Michigan, a 1940 G. O. P. Presidential possibility, said "the vote very definitely reflects the fact that the country has ceased to be willing to take all of Mr. Roosevelt's medicine with a smile and with confidence that the doctor knows his business. I wish it would take as much time scrutinizing his $4,000,000,000 worth of 'pump priming.'"

Senator Burton K. Wheeler (Democrat), Montana, a leader of the Senate opposition, called it "a great victory for the people of the country." Wheeler said the bill would have become law several weeks ago if the Administration had accepted his amendment requiring affirmative action by Congress on the President's merger proposals.

In Detroit, Father Charles E. Coughlin, whose radio speeches against the bill deluged Congress with telegraphed protests, said recommittal of the measure "is a victory for the people of all classes and creeds and political parties." He added: "America is still American."

From Rochester, N. Y., Frank E. Gannett, publisher and head of the National Committee to Uphold Constitutional Government, declared House action "means this Nation is determined to stick to constitutional Government and will not go further on the road to dictatorship.

Democrats Thanked.

Gannett, whose organization was charged by the Senate Lobby Committee with "propagandizing" against the bill, said Democrats "who had the courage and the patriotism to vote against the President, even at the risk of reprisal and loss of patronage, deserve the thanks of all citizens. So, too, these Republicans who opposed the bill."

Luther C. Steward, president of the National Federation of Federal Employes, who supported civil service provisions of the merger bill, said recommittal "disposes of the measure adversely for this Congress."

Steward added:

"Through force of circumstances not of our own choosing most important provisions for the civil service were contained in an omnibus bill which became a political issue and although extension of the merit system, extension of classification, setting up of boards of review and the establishment of a single civil service administrator are in no wise partisan questions, they were caught in the whirlpool of politics and carried to defeat."

Reorganization Death Good News to Them!

News that the reorganization bill was committed spread rapidly through Washington last night and for more than an hour The Post was swamped by telephone calls from citizens seeking confirmation. Almost without exception, inquirers expressed pleasure, some with considerable violence.

"Boy, oh boy!" shouted one man.

"That's wonderful," a woman cried and hung up babbling the information to someone else.

"Thank the Lord!" exclaimed another.

"Fine." "Fine work." "That's great," and simply spontaneous laughter accompanied almost every call.

Over the Coffee

By Harlan Miller

OUR NO. 1 DIPLOMAT.

Behind his external gravity, Cordell Hull nurtures an elfin sense of humor which delights the State Department regulars at his daily 12:30 press conferences.

His whimseys aren't so apparent to the special writers who drop in on days of ultra-super-colossal crisis when a Panay incident or a Mexican oil shenanigan or a European bellyache attracts them from Olympus.

• • • •

Mrs. Hull.

. . . home early.

To a high-powered question by one of the walking-stick journalists the Secretary is as apt as not to reply:

"May I refer you to my remarks on August 3, 1936? As I recall the occasion, I think I kept you gentlemen standing so long some of you almost fainted."

• • • •

When asked a pointed question a little prematurely, on some delicate tidbit of foreign policy, he used to be content to put the questioner off like this:

"We are considering all phases of that question, and the matter is developing, but as yet we have not reached a point where we are in a position to discuss it."

None of these sentences, of course, is an exact quotation; for reasons of state the secretary must not be quoted verbatim.

"—butter vs. cannons."

But nowadays his replies involve a more complex use of the word "phases" which leaves the questioner clinging to the ropes:

"That situation is complicated by the interplay of many phases which are receiving our most careful analysis. However, each phase is made up of so many individual circumstances and conditions that we are attempting to investigate each phase of the circumstances and conditions so that we will have a true comprehension of the entire development."

• • • •

In his native Tennessee dialect, Mr. Hull's statesmanlike utterances are peculiarly and aptly American . . . His gentle treatment of the letter "r"—he often treats it as if it were a "w"—tends to soften any stowaway pugnacity that might be lingering . . .

• • • •

Startling headlines may bring on a question which forces him to answer "Nothing on that has crossed my desk as yet" . . . But he is likely to soften it with "We always want to be he'pful to you gentlemen."

• • • •

Early in his career he once referred to Mike McDermott, chief of current information, as Mr. McBwide—McBride is his assistant. He still enjoys referring to McDermott as McBride, watching the expressions on their faces:

"If anything comes in later in the day I'll be glad to have Mr. McBwide give it to you."

• • • •

Once someone asked Mr. Hull if he agreed with a statement on foreign policy made by that famed footballer, Representative Ham Fish . . . He reflected a moment, then said hestitantly:

"I think we will let Mr. Fish have a clear field."

"he thinks butter will win."

One of his favorite sentences goes something like "that all ties in with our policy of trade agreements."

In this policy there is much more than meets the eye.

Dictators may scream that cannon are more important than butter; Secretary Hull proceeds on the belief that in the long run the appetite of people for butter (even under dictatorships) will overcome their enthusiasm for cannon.

• • • •

Perhaps the bravest spectacle in current diplomacy is the sight of Mr. Hull pushing and guiding his wagonload of goods that men and women enjoy out among the cannoneers of the world . . . People like to buy things, they like to get something for their work besides armaments, so he is betting on trade agreements, in the long run, to last longer than any axis.

• • • •

At White House parties and other important functions, Mr. and Mrs. Hull are usually the first to leave—partly because their high rank and precedence prevent others from going home until the Hulls have left, partly because they like to go home early to their apartment at the Carlton Hotel.

• • • •

The latest polls show Mr. Hull at the top among the Presidential possibilities for 1940 . . . The high esteem in which he is held in Washington seems to be percolating out. . . . After hours he sometimes doffs the restraints of the good gray statesman . . . On such occasions his conversation is rugged, earthly, pungent and direct. It would surprise the European statesmen who have listened to his chaste utterances via short wave radios.

Democracies Look to U. S., Laski Warns

America Must Readjust Government Powers, Economist Holds.

Success Here Is Key to World Future, 2,500 Are Told.

The future of world democracy depends on successful adjustment of the American governmental system to urgent problems facing the Nation, Prof. Harold J. Laski last night told an audience of 2,500 in Constitution Hall.

"The lamps of reason, one by one, are going out in Europe," the distinguished English political theorist said. "Here in the United States you still have an opportunity to make successful the democratic experiment. You possess a responsibility impossible to overestimate.

"England can still be trusted to give a good account of itself," Laski remarked, "but American resources and powers of experimentation are so vast that the impact of success in this country would be far greater than in any other nation."

Widen Federal Powers.

To make democracy work in America, the speaker contended, the Federal Government must be granted far-reaching powers over the social and economic life of the country.

He said such powers would not bring despotism in their wake "so long as the people can change the character of their Government and so long as there is an effective opposition." The American opposition in recent years, he hinted, has been based on "indignation" rather than "intelligent criticism."

Terming the States "obsolete economic units within the framework of giant industry," Laski said, "The classic, historical epoch of Federalism is over."

Can Enter Any Business.

A positive, effective government "must have the power to go into business where it will, whatever the nature of the business," the lecturer said, repudiating "the notion that there is any form of economic enterprise from which government is inherently alien."

The right to insist on uniform application throughout the country of certain minimum standards of education, wages and hours, housing and public health is also indispensable to the central government, he declared.

Alluding delicately to the heated reorganization controversy, Laski observed that "a modern government for this country would require wide flexibility in authority to adjust its internal administrative processes.

'Over-Tender' on Taxation.

"I am sometimes bewildered at the objects chosen in the United States for popular excitement," he added dryly.

Americans, he continued, are "over-tender" on the subject of taxation. "The right of the state to use taxing power for social ends is inherent in the very quality of sovereignty and essential to the workings of government."

Charging that "the mere conflict of private interests will never produce a welded commonwealth," the London University professor said, "The full right, in all its consequences, for the Federal Government to embark on a planned economy is unmistakable. The Government needs full power to deal with economic empires which threaten the control of the American people over its own destiny."

Private Efficiency Questioned. . .

Attacking the theory that government-in-industry is necessarily inefficient and bureaucratic, Laski asked:

"Is the efficiency of private enterprise in the United States beyond question? Is there no bureaucracy in your great corporations? Is there no flexibility in Government agencies?"

Last night's lecture concluded a series of two on "The Future of Federalism in the United States."

16th Field Artillery Will Parade Today

The first battalion of the Sixteenth Field Artillery, U. S. A., will hold a mounted parade and review on the Fort Myer drill field this morning at 10 o'clock in honor of Maj. Gen. Robert M. Danford, newly-appointed chief of Field Artillery.

Gen. Danford recently commanded the Thirteenth Field Artillery in Hawaii, and was chief of staff of the Sixth Corps Area before his appointment as chief of Field Artillery on March 25.

360 Rare Volumes on 'Heathenish Weed' Displayed

Arents Treasures Shown for First Time, at Library of Congress.

By Gerald G. Gross

Here lieth he, had lived longer, if He had not choakt himself with a tobacco whiff.

Such was the epitaph of an early seventeenth century social smoker but friends and foes alike of Lady Nicotine lavished praise yesterday upon the collection of tobacco literature which went on exhibition at the Library of Congress.

Lent by the New York millionaire George Arents and representing the cream of his $1,000,000 crop which has been more than 40 years in the gathering, the display is the first of its kind ever seen here.

It was brought here from New York in an armored truck, under heavy guard.

The epitaph quoted above is from Edmund Gardiner's "The Trail of Tobacco," published in London in 1610 to present recipes for tobacco juice drinks and gargles, also a tobacco prescription to cure lockjaw.

Occupying a prominent place in the exhibit is Arents' favorite of his entire collection, Martin Waldseemuller's "Cosmographiae Introductio," in which appears for the first time in print the suggestion that the New World be named after Amerigo Vespucci, whom the author believed to be the discoverer.

In the volume, which appeared in 1507, Vespucci makes the first observation on tobacco chewing. The well-preserved book is the earliest published notice relating to tobacco.

Extremely rare, possibly the only one in existence, is the "General Historie of Virginia" by Capt. John Smith (1627). It shows that he opposed traffic in the "heathenish weed." This copy belonged to William Seymour, husband of Lady Arabella Stuart, heir to the English throne.

Another book by Capt. John Smith, relating his "true travels, adventures and observations," was originally in the library of King Charles I and has his coat of arms on the covers.

Every conceivable phase of the subject is covered—the botany of tobacco, ceremonials and rituals, mythology, reports by explorers, aboriginal and commercial cultivation, medical uses, literature in which tobacco figures, controversy, legislation and taxation, etc.

There is a first edition of Edmund Spenser's "Faerie Queene," Elizabethan epic containing the first known reference to tobacco in English poetry. In defense of smoking is Holyday's play "Technogamia:"

Earth ne'er did breed
Such a Jovial weed,
Whereof to boast so proudly.

Presented before King James in 1621, it displeased him very much for he was violently opposed to smoking and smokers. The exhibition includes a copy, one of the few in existence, of the monarch's famous "A Counter-blaste to Tobacco," in which he deplores the cost of this "precious stink."

There are more than 360 volumes in the Library of Congress showing, in Hebrew, Italian, Latin, French, Hungarian, Norwegian, German, Danish, Spanish and other languages. The exhibition also includes manuscripts, prints, broadsides and maps.

Never before has Arents broken up his world-famed collection even temporarily to make the best of his items available to the public. The display here will continue for several weeks, then the books will be returned to Hillbrook, the owner's residence near Rye, N. Y.

Parking Lot Unit to Make Tram Survey

Skip-Stops to Speed Buses and Trolleys Are Considered.

5 D. C. Officials Outline Broad Study of Problems.

Skip-stop bus and street-car service will be studied by a special committee which yesterday drafted plans for municipally owned parking lots or garages. Co-ordination with the transportation system was regarded as part of the comprehensive plan to aid moving of traffic generally in the congested areas.

Under the system the buses and street cars would not stop at every intersection, but might, for example, make stops at every other intersection. This system was adopted in the District during the war and is used in other cities now.

Program Is Outlined.

The committee, made up of five District officials, met for the first time yesterday. A suggested plan involved the following:

An up-to-date survey of existing parking facilities. This would include curb space, off-street space and in nearby park areas.

Cost of operating a parking lot per car per day.

Desirable location for parking facilities.

Co-ordination with transportation system.

Review of experiences in other cities.

Development of off-street loading and parking facilities by Government and commercial establishments.

It was pointed out that it might be necessary to charge different rates for parking, depending on the value of the land available for lots or garage buildings.

A point in the outline tended to defeat the suggestion that all lots would be sought for the downtown area. It was suggested by the committee that space near the edge of the business district, near the Washington terminal and at the outlying points in the District be studied.

Would Cut Turns.

"There is plenty of preliminary work to be considered before tackling the financial end of it," announced Capt. H. C. Whitehurst, director of highways and chairman of the special committee.

Mention was also given to the revising the transportation system so as to eliminate excess turns by street cars and buses. Express service by the public conveyances will be studied.

The committee also includes Traffic Director William A. Van Duzer, Vernon E. West, assistant corporation counsel; Ed Dent, District surveyor, and John Nolen, Park and Planning Commission.

Meanwhile, widening of K street in the vicinity of West End Market, scene of parking controversy for the past year, was suggested by Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen.

Street to Be Widened.

The plan would be the same as will be followed in the lower portion of K street between Connecticut avenue and Twelfth street, where work will begin shortly to widen the street.

Money for the widening of K street between these two points has already been appropriated by Congress. Funds for the widening of the street near the market would have to come from the general highway fund, it was disclosed.

At the present time farmers selling their wares near the market are allowed to park head-in, although it is a violation of the traffic laws which call for parallel parking. After a fight which involved Virginia and Maryland Congressmen and District officials, it was decided to permit head-in parking until a complete survey would be completed pertaining to the situation.

Fascist Attack By Ickes Draws Dr. Walsh's Fire

'Grave Disservice to Truth and Historical Accuracy' Charged in Talk.

Secretary Ickes did "a grave disservice to truth and historical accuracy" in his attack on fascism at the fiftieth anniversary celebration of the Jewish Daily Courier of Chicago recently, the Rev. Edmund A. Walsh, S. J., vice president of Georgetown University, said last night in a lecture in Memorial Continental Hall.

Ickes' address, said Dr. Walsh, who is regent of the Georgetown School of Foreign Service, was "symbolical of the mental confusion existing in minds unacquainted with the origin and meaning of those two familiar terms, communism and fascism." The interior secretary, the speaker said, "fulminated in extremely intemperate language against that large percentage of American citizens who have recognized the ultimate purposes of Marxian communism with its demonstrated challenge to democracy and Christian civilization."

"Intellectual Suicide."

Dr. Walsh said no one "particularly of Mr. Ickes' antecedents" should question the motives of those who "refuse to minimize the dangers of international communism" and that he himself "refused to commit intellectual suicide by succumbing to the strategy formulated . . . by the High Staff of the Communist International." He said American delegates to the Seventh World Congress in Moscow in 1935 were instructed to employ the word "Fascist" wherever they previously had used "Imperialist" and "Bourgeois."

This strategy, he said, has led in recent years to "one of the major triumphs of the Communist propaganda machine." Its "skilled falsifiers," he said, have turned attention from their own "anti-American and un-Christian objectives" to "a wide variety of political philosophies which happen to be militantly opposed to Soviet Russia."

Fascists, Nazis Used.

"Thus," he said, "they have progressively included Fascist Italy, Nazi Germany, Imperial Japan, and Insurgent Spain, though each of these differs radically in political doctrine, social dogma, and racial objectives. The only important common factor, for the Communist, is their opposition to his Marxian philosophy. But he has shrewdly won the uncritical to his inclusive terminology although the only Fascist among the four is Signor Mussolini. Of the others, one is a National Socialist, another a propertied imperialist, and the third possibly a monarchist."

Citizens' Fair Tax Group Maps Fight in Senate for Income Levy

N. Arnold Tolls Named Chairman of Committee's Council.

Indorsing the graduated income tax as approved by the House District Committee as "desirable, but open for improvement," members of the Citizens' Committee on Fair Taxation last night made final preparations to push the bill through the Senate.

Terming the proposed beer tax a "hidden sales levy," N. Arnold Tolls, elected chairman of the committee's tax council last night, urged members to request "every Senator you know" to be present on the floor Monday to vote on the measure.

Members of the committee will distribute copies of the first edition of a series of tax information bulletins to more than 400 members of Congress this morning urging the graduated income tax instead of a sales levy for District residents. The bulletin cites the sales tax method as "regressive instead of a progressive means of taxation."

Comparing the amount of annual tax paid on the basis of income and sales purchases, the bulletin shows a single person with a net income of $1,000 would be required to pay $8.30 under a 1 per cent sales tax, but nothing under the income tax method. A single person with a net income of $2,000 would pay $14.60 under the sales levy method and $6.67 on the income tax basis, the bulletin states.

A person earning $20,000 a year would pay a total sales tax levy of $68, while under the income tax he would be required to pay $315, or $15.75 tax per $1,000 income.

The committee, meeting at the quarters of the American Association of University Women, under the chairmanship of Mrs. John Boyle, jr., elected Arthur Bernstein chairman of the research committee and Mrs. Boyle acting chairman of the legislative committee. The next meeting was scheduled for Tuesday, April 19.

Opposition Voiced

The proposed income tax for the District, scheduled to be reported out of the House Monday, was opposed as "class legislation" last night by members of the Brightwood Citizens' Association at a meeting in the Paul Junior High School. The association previously advocated a sales tax.

The municipal parking lot proposal was favored by the citizens' organization, but members voted to request the Commissioners to postpone enactment of the recent parking restrictions until additional parking space for auto owners is provided.

The association also opposed the issuance of liquor licenses by the Alcohol Beverage Control Board in strictly residential areas and voted to request the board to inform all citizens' associations of liquor applications before permits are granted.

Tax Bill Spares U. S. Problem Boss Faces

One of the fine shades of difference between Uncle Sam as an employer and John Public as an employer was brought out yesterday in the printed copy of the new District revenue bill.

Where other District employers would be responsible for collecting the proposed graduated income tax from employees who live outside the city area, "no disbursing officer of the U. S. Government" would come under this provision.

Oral discussion of the measure had not revealed this distinction, which was written into the bill as a last-minute thought—occasioned by rebellion among Federal agencies at the idea of so much extra bookeeping.

The bill will come up in the House next Monday, which is District day. Approval has been predicted, despite widespread opposition among civic and business groups.

Jefferson Shrine Criticism Goads Boylan to Reply

Smarting at criticism by House colleagues and the Fine Arts Commission, Representative John J. Boylan (Democrat), of New York, yesterday lashed back at them with a detailed defense of the Roman pantheon design approved by the Thomas Jefferson Memorial Commission, which he heads.

"One may argue that the day for adoption of classical models is over and that the harmony of classical character in the buildings of Washington should be abandoned," he said, "but clearly the Jefferson Memorial is not the building with which to begin."

Boylan expressed surprise at opposition by Gilmore D. Clarke, chairman of the Fine Arts Commission, pointing out that he previously had voiced no criticism of the design.

The New Yorker's rebuttal came as Representative Kent E. Keller, chairman of the House Library Committee, reiterated objections to the memorial group's policy of making decisions before consulting the committee.

Meantime, the District Chapter, American Institute of Architects, announced adoption of a resolution urging selection of architects for public buildings by competition. The memorial group selected John Russell Pope, now dead, without competition.

Commissioners Ask Insurance Rate Controls

Fire and Lightning Charges Far Too High, Report Declares.

Exorbitant fire insurance rates were denounced yesterday by the District Commissioners in a report to the Budget Bureau urging enactment of pending legislation which would place control of the local rates in the hands of superintendent of insurance.

The Commissioners acted on the recommendation of J. Balch Moor, insurance superintendent, and on many complaints that the existing rates are arbitrary and too high.

"There is no control of fire and lightning insurance rates, the report said and in the District, "such rates are arrived at by arbitrary and discriminatory methods by various companies, resulting in excessive charges."

"The national average covering the period 1922 to 1936 shows a loss ratio of approximately 42 per cent, with the remaining 58 per cent going for expenses and profit, while in the District, for the same period, the loss ratio was approximately 22 per cent, with 78 per cent going for profit and expenses. There are 28 States that now have similar laws. The provisions of the act under consideration have been adopted from laws now in force in Virginia, New York and Illinois."

A bill prohibiting loitering in public places such as hotels, apartment houses, stores or stations, was also sent to the Budget Bureau yesterday by the commissioners. The bill provides for the arrest of any person "loitering" who refuses to leave when asked by the owner, lessee, managing agent or person in charge. It would provide for a fine of not more than $25 for each offense.

Parran to Help Open Health Parley Today

Surgeon General Thomas Parran, of the Public Health Service; Dr. Martha Eliot, assistant chief of the Children's Bureau, representatives of the American Medical Association and other leaders will participate this morning in the opening of the conference of State and provincial health authorities.

The meeting, lasting through Monday, will be held in the auditorium of the Public Health Service Building. A symposium on medical and public health services is scheduled for this morning.

Religion Held Only Hope of Better Order

Love Is the One Solution, Bishop Kern Tells Congregation.

To the world the Christian faith may seem foolish, but it still offers the only program capable of building new individuals and a better social order, according to Bishop Paul B. Kern, who addressed the final union Lenten service of three downtown churches at Mount Vernon Place M. E. Church last night.

"There are three philosophies of life competing for the loyalties of men," he declared. "There are those to whom life is judged by outward standards and material values; there are those to whom life is judged by the test of earthly wisdom, and those to whom life is judged by the principles of love revealed in the Cross of Christ."

The bishop said, "religion does not always seem to work judged by worldly standards, but love is the only solution, and at last conquers."

Assisting in the service were Dr. William S. Abernathy, pastor of the Calvary Baptist Church; Dr. Howard Stone Anderson, of the First Congregational Church, and Dr. John W. Rustin, of Mount Vernon M. E. Church, South. The young people of the latter congregation were special guests. The choir sang the concluding chorus from Haydn's "Creation."

Two Tippett Boys Are Given Long Prison Terms

Justice Jesse C. Adkins sentenced Ellis M. Tippett, 20, of Ardmore, Md., to serve 11 to 28 years in prison, and his brother, Ellsworth, 17, to 10 to 25 years yesterday for robbery.

"How much time does that mean I have to pull?" Ellsworth snarled after the sentences had been pronounced. Justice Adkins told him. "You can take it and go to hell," the youth said as he was hurried away by court attaches. The judge apparently did not hear the remark.

Ellsworth pleaded guilty to six robbery charges, two of assault with intent to commit robbery, and one of assault with intent to kill.

His brother, whom he tried to protect by pleading guilty, went on trial on one charge, was found guilty.

Going Into a War Would Make America Fascist, Speakers Say

America will become fascistic if she enters another World War, according to speakers in the Department of Interior auditorium last night, discussing "Alternate Roads to Peace." The discussion was sponsored by Local No. 50, United Federal Workers of America, a C. I. O. affiliate.

Commissioner of Education John W. Studebaker presided. Stephen Raushenbush, consultant of the National Council for the Prevention of War, upheld isolation. Clark M. Eichelberger, director of the League of Nations Associations, spoke for collective security.

Raushenbush said he challenged nine tenets of believers in collective security, asserting that America could not agree on a program with France and England at present because of internal conditions in those countries. Eichelberger, however, maintained that if America does not take the initiative in curing world problems, she will inevitably be led "down the road to ruin" by others.

During the question period one listener unsuccessfully requested two hours in which to lecture on Biblical predictions of America's downfall.

Cab Calloway Hits Jackpot At the Earle

Stage Show Excels an Inexpert Film Play of 'Big House.'

"OVER THE WALL." Warner Brothers' picturization of a story by Warden Lewis E. Lawes, of Sing Sing, adapted to the screen by Crane Wilbur and George Bricker, featuring Dick Foran, John Litel, Veda Ann Borg, June Travis, Jonathan Hale, Dick Purcell, George E. Stone, Raymond Hatton and Eddie Chandler. Directed by Frank McDonald. Reviewed Friday afternoon by Mary Harris. At the Earle Theater.

That Calloway infection is rife at the Earle this week and should be epidemic throughout the town this week. Because Cab is plumb busting, not only with zaz-u-zaz and hi-de-ho germs, but has a new microbe, the "Whoo-op-boo-om!"

Calloway rhythm-making should not be depreciated by the term of "swing." This critic finds Caucasian swing depressing and provocative of ear specialists' bills. What we're trying to say is that white man's swing is like a rooster laying an egg—perfectly marvelous, but appalling.

But when Calloway and his cocoa and coffee colored cohorts pass out the hot numbers, it's something else again. You get the authentic expression of a race, natural and uninhibited, as inevitable as milk pouring out of a cocoanut. Instance—take that horrible tune, "Mamma, I Want To Make Rhythm," that has blasted our ears and given our stomachs the upsie-downsies over the radio, these too many weeks. You won't believe it, but Cab takes this gift to the bromo-seltzer people and plays it so that you'll love it and laugh at it in the way the composer meant you to do.

Band Is "Tops."

In balance, the Calloway show is perfect. The specialty performers are all away up in the stratosphere, so far as their ability is concerned—but so is Cab and his orchestra. It's a perfect tie between the orchestra and the specialty group, with the personality and individuality of the orchestra leader dominating the show. And that's the way a big orchestra act ought to work out in audience appreciation.

About the funniest thing that has happened at the Earle this year is Stumpy's idea of how Donald Duck would sing "Margy." But partner Stump countered with almost equally good clowning and the way the boys can tap will soothe your ears. The Six Cotton Club boys, uniformed in the Naval Academy manner (uh-ho), also danced like cafe-au-lait fiends.

In Avis Andrews the Calloway show has a really remarkable singer in the honey-dripping style. Nor does she reach for the high notes. She swoops up and over them like an eagle. But may this critic suggest to Avis, in the best spirit, that black gowns don't go with those beige skins which are naturally made for rainbow colors.

Before the show is over Cab has the audience enthusiastically joining in "Hi-de-hi's" and "Ho-de-ho's," also his new "Whoo-op-boom!" But no brave souls attempted to follow Cab in those complicated syllabics that sweep Calloway music to plumb frenzy.

Something paralyzing called "Hi-de-ho Romeo and Juliet," done by Calloway and Avis Andrews, climaxed the show. A few of the lines are enough to set your hair on end, but it is only fair to say that they're so fast and funny that they don't call for censorship.

All said, it's a great week at the Earle.

Lawes, Lawes!

Sponsored by no less a person than the great Warden Lawes, "Over the Wall" comes along with the prestige of "Alcatraz Island" which, made as a "B" picture, turned out to be strictly Grade A, from the box-office standpoint.

Well, with even an eye biased in its favor, may we recomend "Over the Wall" for those who want Grade A entertainment. (But we're speaking of grade school.)

"Over the Wall" is so wholesome that it will drive you out either to take a beaker of chocolate milk or attend a lecture. You'd feel too guilty if you did anything else.

Nominally, it's a story about a truck driver, with prize-fighter ambitions, who was framed into the Big House and who framed himself out by becoming a radio crooner with the help of the good father of the prison. There is no psychology, no background and, frankly, no sense to the affair.

Dick Foran does the best anyone could do with a lunkhead part. John Litel plays the padre. No one else matters, except that Raymond Hatton looks plenty realistic as a convict.

Leon Errol, unfailingly full of fun, shines in "His Pest Friend," and there is a color trip to Singapore.

Metropolitan

Ernst Lubitsch's latest demonstration of his peculiar facility for rendering risque farces completely and agreeably innocuous — a gelatin transcription of the stage play of "Bluebeard's Eighth wife"—continued its downtown run at the Metropolitan yesterday after a highly successful week as major screen attraction at the Warner Brothers' Earle.

In this subject, under the discreet manipulation of the most skillful directors known to the screen, Claudette Colbert and Gary Cooper cavort through the enlivening passages of a frolic that might have been just a little objectionable under less astute auspices. They are supported by an admirable cast of farceurs, headed by the always reliable Edward Everett Horton and David Niven, with Elizabeth Patterson and many others adroit in the requirements of comedy completing an excellent roster of principals.

There is not too much to the story—merely the recital of how a vivacious young eighth wife of an American multimillionaire put her husband in his place while they were honeymooning in Paris and on the French Riviera. But that is enough. The play is amusing—and always has been, since the days when Ina Claire appeared in it—even if not devastatingly explosive.

The production is one of the most elaborately contrived of the season. Elegance stands out all over the place. And Miss Colbert appears in a few costumes that may be relied upon to turn the feminine members of any audience into a livid green.

The bill at the Metropolitan this week is augmented by the usual house features and full newsreel.

Nelson B. Bell About The Showshops

'Judge Hardy's Children,' on Screen, And Pennsylvanians Score at Capitol

Simple Film Play and Ace Band Make for Fine Bill.

"JUDGE HARDY'S CHILDREN." Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer picturization of a story by Kay Van Riper, based on characters created by Aurania Rouverol, featuring Lewis S. Stone, Mickey Rooney, Cecilia Parker, Fay Holden, Betty Ross Clark, Ann Rutherford, Jacqueline Laurent, Ruth Hussey, Jonathan Hale, Janet Beecher, Leonard Penn and Boyd Crawford. Directed by George B. Seitz. Reviewed Friday afternoon at Loew's Capitol Theater.

It evidently is not necessary to make a "big" picture in order to make an intensely appealing one.

BELL.

"Judge Hardy's Children," third in the series from the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer Studio involving the same characters—the other two were "A Family Affair" and "You're Only Young Once"—in the estimate of this producing company, inevitably would be rated a "B" picture. It is "B" only in physical dimensions. In down-to-earth human appeal, predicated upon the perplexities of an average middle-class American family, it is distinctly "A."

It is a simple story that is disclosed in this homely and engaging subject. A "small-town" judge is appointed to a commission sitting in Washington, and, through the indiscretions of his children, becomes involved in a series of events that promise to give rise to a scandal of sufficient proportions to occasion his retirement from the bench. From his flip young son, Judge Hardy derives the tip that enables him to solve his problems to the complete discomfiture of his political opponents, the rehabilitation of the youthful romances among the younger members of his family and the solace of his sympathetic and understanding wife.

Master Rooney Stars.

The picture really belongs to that prodigious youngster, Mickey Rooney. Whether or not M-G-M is grooming this alert young man for stardom, I wouldn't know. Upon the evidence of this release, they well might be. Master Rooney, cocky, slangy, self-assertive and tremendously proud of his father, is the mainspring of "Judge Hardy's Children," and, insofar as my close observation went yesterday afternoon, never makes a mistake in the execution of the considerable duties that devolve upon him.

This is high tribute to any youngster tossed into acting competition wtih the veteran Lewis S. Stone, Fay Holden, Jonathan Hale and the other maturer members of the cast. The juvenile Rooney, however, is not alone in his eminence. Cecilia Parker, Jacqueline Laurent and others of importance in the goings-on share honors with him on the younger side. The whole thing, as a matter of fact, is cast with a judiciouness seldom bestowed upon studio productions not planned to shatter all known records in the matter of expansiveness and overwhelming magnitude.

In "Judge Hardy's Children" I should say that Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer ought to find the encouragement to continue this series indefinitely—even to the point of attenuation that has been attained by such other "continued in our next" releases as the "Charlie Chan," "Mr. Moto" and "The Jones Family" features.

On the stage at the Capitol this week, the entertainment, of course, is sure-fire, being in the hands of that brilliant young maestro, Fred Waring, and his musicianly cohorts known as The Pennsylvanians.

Since making "Varsity Show" for the screen on the West Coast, and suffering a considerable depletion of his stellar forces on that account, Fred has found it necessary to supplant old faces with new in his present enterprise. There are still many of the old faces left—Poly McClintock, that fog-horn gutturalist who presides over the percussion instruments; Nels Keller, first trumpet; Stuart Churchill, "Scotty" Bates, comedian, and others who have become familiar fixtures of this sterling organization through the years.

Stresses Comedy.

Donna Dae—which sounds suspiciously like "Dawn of Day"—is one of the attractive newcomers who adds to the almost unbroken procession of specialties that characterize the offering of Washington's favorite orchestra. Betty Atkinson, that extremely perky and accomplished drum-majorette, who did so well in "Varsity Show" and has been doing the same ever since, continues to lend a thrilling touch to the finale of the band's turn on the stage.

Once again, Fred Waring bears down on the comedy note and, as always, his male glees are an important feature of the entertainment he provides. If there is a better interval of orchestral diversion than this anywhere on the boards, I never yet have encountered it.

The Fox Movietone News, as usual, is a screen supplementary that affords a wide range of topics—including the inimitable dialectic comedy of that prize zany, Lew Lehr.

It is a shrewd bit of booking that combines so unpretentious, but so worthy a picture as "Judge Hardy's Children" with so pretentious, and equally worthy, a stage offering as the Pennsylvanians always supply.

PerfumeEmployed As Aid to Actors

Michael Curtiz, director of "Four's a Crowd," has ordered Rosalind Russell and Olivia de Havilland to wear perfume—the more seductive, the better—in forthcoming romantic sequences.

The director is a strong believer in perfumes as "mood setters." He believes they can inspire romance more effectively even than music. And so Errol Flynn and Patric Knowles will be subjected to the aromatic hypnosis.

A Specialist With Waring's Band

one of the attractive young women who add appreciably to the entertainment provided on the stage at Loew's Capitol Theater this week by Fred Waring and his Pennsylvanians. There are several newcomers in the "act" since its ranks were more or less ravaged by Hollywood following the making of "Varsity Show," the Warner Brothers picture in which the Pennsylvanians were cofeatured with Dick Powell and the late Ted Healy.

In Hollywood

With HEDDA HOPPER

Hollywood, Calif., April 8.—Today I received a letter from a dyed-in-the-wool New Yorker who has been part and parcel of its changing pattern for the last 25 years. A staunch and valued friend of all actors and writers he's come in contact with, Frank Case—of the Algonquin Hotel, where for years it was considered by everyone except Odd McIntyre, the greatest honor to be invited to sit at "the round table." Odd refused to occupy a chair there because he thought the ink-slinging boys, after attaining success, became too caustic—and they thought him old-fashioned.

HEDDA HOPPER.

Where Alexander Woollcott hatched many stories, and his assistant, George S. Kaufman, was delighted when able to write a criticism and sign his own name to it.

Where Marc Connolly, after selling his first story, strived for lunch in a bowler hat, a cane and white spats and took an awful razzing.

Where lumbering Heywood Broun and Frank Adams (F. P. A.) gathered stories.

Anita Loos really discovered that Gentleman Prefer Blondes there

Gertrude Stein occupied the suite of rooms which Anna May Wong had just vacated.

Where Doug and Beth—the first Mrs. Fairbanks—used to hibernate between trips to Europe and the Coast.

Where Frank Case took out his bar long before we went prohibition.

It was also Tallulah Bankhead's home when she first came from the South.

Frank writes:

"My dear Hedda: Life in Hollywood, especially to one on a complete vacation, with nothing to do, no duties, engagements—is exceedingly pleasant. And one of the pleasantest items of my lazy day is reading your column each morning.

"When you meet a New Yorker out here, if you know his nature and tastes, you can recite the conversation in advance before hearing it. If an outdoor man, whether passive or active, he's enthusiastic about the country. Active guys like games, golf, tennis, polo, swimming. Passive ones like to sit in the sun, prowl the beach, motor, go to the races. They love California.

"The indoor man is the night club addict, or cafe hero. He hates the whole place. His indictment is expressed in well-worn phrases, which have long since become tiresome.

"The late Raymond Hitchcock once defined a cafe hero as a man who is so popular on Broadway that he has drinks named after him. But has a wife and two children starving in East Orange, N. J.

"Your State is a paradise for the outdoor gentleman. But for the fellow who lives by electric light, with the shades pulled down, it is mild purgatory. The people who live here, native or adopted, have solved the problem of living. They work hard, play hard, and enjoy both equally. New York is unimportant and a long way off. The Stork Club, El Morocco, 21, the Algonquin—are words. They know them, so what?

"Washington is known as a place where they make laws and impose taxes, most of which are unreasonable. Yes, they obey laws, pay taxes. But don't talk much of either. (You're wrong, there, Frank, we howl.)

"Lunch, golf, writing, picture making are very pleasant happenings. They live in fine houses. Eat beautiful food. Enjoy lazy weather. New York, Washington, like the war in China—deplorable—but too far off to bother about.

"Some unhappy exiles here complain there is no music. But they never think of going to the Hollywood Bowl, where the finest musicians in the world are to be heard. Just as they never go to the Metropolitan Opera. The same prattle about art. I wonder if they know that the Huntington Galleries are here? They never spent an afternoon in the Metropolitan Museum, either.

"Then there's no one out here to talk to. Terrible. In two days I talked with Rupert Hughes, Gene Markey, Irvin Cobb, Doug Fairbanks, Sam Hoffenstein, Harry Hirshfield, Bob Benchley. Dull fellows, all of them, as you well know. But if the days were longer, I might do better.

"Hospitality is overwhelming. In my three weeks here, I haven't been able to pay for a meal, except my breakfast. (Signed) Frank Case."

Thank you, Frank. The Chamber of Commerce will, too.

How about breakfast with me tomorrow morning?

Palace

Maybe it's the nostalgia stirred up by the famous title and author—"Girl of the Golden West," by David Belasco—that may be why we were disappointed in this picture, which, for all our disappointment, slid smoothly and easily into its second week on F street yesterday.

Maybe—but we really think that the main trouble is the picture's terrific length. Now we didn't time it, but it seemed to go on and on and on, until we were quite worn out and well beyond the soothing effects of sweet music.

We liked this old war-horse of a play as a play. In its musicalized cinema version, the plot is all there. You remember, the "Girl," who runs the Polka saloon; Jack Rance, the sheriff, who loves her, and Ramirez, the bandit, whom she loves. Even the tell-tale drops of blood falling from the loft above and the fatal game of cards are here but, surrounded by so much music, so much added footage of plot and so much sepia photography, they seem to have lost their old time punch.

Miss McDonald is much better than we thought she'd be as the Girl, and better than she has been lately. The accent and the walk are all right and the voice excellent (one tear-drenched song, of course). Mr. Eddy on the other hand is not so good or so happy as he has been, notably in "Naughty Marietta" and "Maytime." He seems acutely uncomfortable for much of the picture, but then who wouldn't be when forced to call his lady, "Goldenhair." We ask you. They seem to give this poor man, the darnedest parts—a Westpointer and now this. He sings beautifully, as always.

However, it is Walter Pidgeon as Rance, who should intrigue the ladies. His is a tall, dark, handsome and smooth performance with a good bit of the play's real flavor. Buddy Ebsen and Leo Carillo help tremendously and H. B. Warner is a lovable priest. The music is rather lovely, the most memorable of the new numbers being the little girl's song and "Si, Si Senorita." Of course, "Ave Maria" and "Liebestraum" are among the immortals.

The holdover shorts are swell. The colorful food in the interesting "Penny's Party" will make anyone's mouth water, and Robert Benchley, in his "How to Make Out Your Income Tax," is Robert Benchley—which should be 'nuff said.

Keith Comedy Clicks Again As Laugh Hit

Hepburn, Grant and Dog Go Into Second Week on Fifteenth St.

So far as we are concerned, "Bringing Up Baby" takes the cast-iron cookie as being the most adroit of all the recent slapstick offerings. Which might be, because it is current and the others past tense. Which is the fate of such delightful fluff.

Katharine Hepburn turns out to be Katie, and a very nice person, in this touching recital of the woes of a bone collector, who meets a daffy girl who has a leopard. She has never been more appealing, and her much-maligned voice is at last in its true register—comedy.

Incident follows accident with such venomous swiftness, such an alacrity of good spirits, that one hardly has time to wonder if it is quite cricket to take old Keystone tricks and streamline them to such panicking proportions.

Cary Grant offers the sturdy leavening for the plot and gives it a note which it sorely needs after the soprano tones of the star. Not that Katie is no good. She isn't merely good; she's GOOD!

That Wire-Hair Again.

Support (by a leopard, yclept baby, Alison Skipworth, Mae Robson, Charles Ruggles, Barry Fitzgerald and Walter Catlett) is superb. There is also a dog, variously known as Asta, Mr. Smith, and in this, George. Clever canine.

Plot? Grant has a bone. No, George (Asta) has the bone. Now Katie has the bone. And finally, when the precious whatyacallit bone is all ready to be put in place in the dinosaur's spine, Katie crashes it all. Which we apologetically offer as a skeletonized idea. Really the story bristles with zany situations, bubbles, with wit, hops with exuberance and lags only a forgivable few minutes occasionally. It is required seeing.

In the newsreel you may see army tanks coming off France's assembly lines, our Army Day, and the Levine boy's father making a personal appeal for help in locating his kidnaped son. Mr. Disney turns out another lovely short called "The Moth and the Flame," which has a moral as delicate as its fine Technicolor—if you don't mind a moral.

The whole bill is elegant. S. S.

Columbia

Executed throughout its length in the most exquisite tints Technicolor so far has been able to produce for the beautification of the screen, "The Goldwyn Follies," which yesterday inaugurated a repeat F street engagement as chief feature of the bill at the Columbia Theater, has more to boast than merely beautiful coloration.

It is one of the most artistic contributions of the year to the distinction of the cinema—brilliant in conception, cleverly humorous in its sly thrusts at Hollywood and peopled by one of the most impressive casts ever assembled for the interpretation of a celluloid musical revue. The names of the principals, of course, already are known to every informed patron of the theater in the National Capital—Adolphe Menjou, Andrea Leeds, the Ritz Brothers, Zorina, Bobby Clark, Helen Jepson, of the Metropolitan Grand Opera; Ella Logan, Kenny Baker, Edgar Bergen and Charlie McCarthy, Phil Baker, Lydia Westman, the Balanchine American Ballet from the Metropolitan, the "Goldwyn Girls" and all the rest.

This is no wasted talent that "The Goldwyn Follies" so proudly boasts. Every member of the cast has something to do worthy of his abilities. The ballet and Venetian canal scenes are among the most entrancing ever brought to the silver sheet. In the various scenes of the revue are combined every form of entertainment from slapstick comedy to grand opera.

As an added attraction this week, the Columbia offers the first installment of a serial play of the first rank—"The Lone Ranger," featuring a man of mystery; Silver, played by himself, and Tonto, impersonated by Chief Thunder Cloud. This item should keep the Columbia filled for many weeks to come.

Trans-Lux

The news end of the show at the Trans-Lux Theater this week is agog with everything the heart, mind and spirit could desire.

Army Day, splendid pictures, vie with Congressional votes on the TVA, while Federal aid is depicted and public assistance appealed for in the horrible Levine kidnaping.

Other news shots show the French speeding their armament preparations and Italian envoys welcomed in Japan. Also we see King Farouk witnessing war maneuvers in the desert. And, also in the new Army bombers are seen soaring over the West Coast, and Yosemite Falls frozen for the first time in many years. There is, for contrast, a 4-year-old bowling star and Helen Wills Moody beginning training. And men may as well pay attention to the hints as to what the best dressed men will do to themselves and wear to be the heroes of 1938.

The latest "March of Time" brings a combat between the brain trust island of Key West, as a Government promoted resort, and a clearly defined description of conditions in Europe starting with the forced resignation of Anthony Eden.

The travel picture for the week takes us to "Brittany", and is colorful and instructive.

There is a cartoon—this time Popeye, and he tells you how to "Learn Polikeness."

Marie Wilson Is Going to School

Marie Wilson, Warner Bros. star, is going in for education in a big way. She has hired a tutor and is going to complete her high school course, then go out for a college degree.

Educated as a child in private schools, Miss Wilson, one of the stars of "Boy Meets Girl," left high school after the first year following the death of her father. She was unable to finish because she had to help support her family.

"Now I'm going to get an education," she says. "It isn't too late, because I'm only 21."

50 Hunters Face Tests Here Today

Bad Footing Expected at Riding and Hunt Club Show.

By John D. Paulus

Bad footing, the direct result of two days of steady rain, plus a tough course that will be a more than fair test for the best hunters, is expected to make things interesting this morning when the seventh annual hunter trials of the Riding and Hunt Club open at Bradley Farms.

Approximately 50 horses are expected to be on hand for the six classes over the 1½-mile course.

The Riding and Hunt Club, sponsors of the trials, naturally not anticipating the bad weather, laid out a course that even on the best day is a difficult trial for horse and rider.

The aiken, post and rail, plank and chicken coop fences built on the new route are not big. The largest is 4 feet, average runs between 3 and 4. Too, each has good take-off and excellent landing. But with the weather being what it has been, and the course laid out with the order of jumps changed, anything can and in all probability will happen.

Views of all Jumps.

A paddock has been rigged up by Charlie Carrico, on whose property the trials are being run. In addition, the new spectators' vantage point will provide a view of the entire course with the crowd able to see every horse over every jump.

The order of the jumps has been somewhat altered, however. Starting over a chicken coop, the riders double back over another, then to the first aiken, over another, then a plank fence, the big aiken, down into the lowlands, back up to a post and rail, then over a worm rail fence and down the grade to the judges' stand.

Lieut. Comdr. Justice Lee will show Bolter and Try Me, both qualified hunters. Crompton Smith, from Middleburg, Va., the premier point-to-point rider in the United States, has entered two of his famous hunters.

Reed Thomas, of Fairfax, Va.; Lewis Randall, of Howard County, Md., of the Howard County Hunt, and Maj. Alexander Olsen, also of that hunt will compete. Talbot T. Spear, of Green Spring Valley, has entered two white hunters qualified with Harford-Elkridge Hunt.

Hart Horses Entered.

Mrs. Thomas T. Hart, of Washington, wife of Rear Admiral Hart, has entered two horses.

Gen Leon B. Kromer, Chief of Calvary of the United States Army, has entered horses in a number of classes. Mr. Harry Semmes and Dr. Fred Sanderson, joint masters of the Riding and Hunt Club hounds, are both entering their hunters.

The judges will be: Col. John T. Thompson, U. S. A.; Augustus Riggs, master of the Howard County Hunt, and Turner Wiltshire, of Piedmont Hunt, Virginia.

Program of Events.

Class A, 11:30, the Junior Hunt Plate—Open to boys or girls who have not yet reached their seventeenth birthday. To be shown on a modified course. Prize: Plate, presented by Mrs Nancy H. McDowell.

Class B, 1:30, the Chevy Chase Plate—Open to any hunter that has hunted at least five times with a recognized or registered hunt since November 1, 1937. Prize: Plate.

Class C 1:45, the Riding and Hunt Club Plate—Open to hunters regularly hunted by members of the Riding and Hunt Club which have hunted at least five times since November 1, 1937, with the Riding and Hunt Club hounds. To be ridden by individual subscribers to the hunt and ridden by the owner. Prize: Plate, presented by the Honorable Henry L. Stimson. Plate to be won three times by some member for permanent ownership.

Class D, 2:30, the Montgomery County Plate—Open to any pair of hunters, not necessarily of the same ownership. One horse of pair to lead and to be followed by second horse of pair, the lead horse to change between the sixth and seventh jumps. Rear horse to follow leading horse at safe hunting distance. Horses to be owned and ridden by members of a recognized or registered hunt.

Class E, 3:15, the Master's Plate—Open to hunters owned and ridden by members of, or subscribers to a recognized or registered hunt. Prize: Plate.

Presented by Dr. Fred R. Sanderson and Harry H. Semmes, masters of fox hounds.

Class F, 4:00, Potomac Plate—Open to any team of three hunters, not necessarily of the same ownership. Horses of team to follow at safe hunting distance. Teams to ride in full hunting attire, appointments to count 15 per cent.

1¼-Mile Test Is Scheduled For Belmont

Riddle Agrees to Terms of Howard; Event to Be Held Next Fall.

By the Associated Press.

New York, April 8.—The proposed $100,000 match race between Samuel Riddle's War Admiral and Charles S. Howard's Seabiscuit was assured today.

Riddle conferred with Herbert Bayard Swope, chairman of the New York Racing Commission, and agreed to terms suggested by Howard for a race at Belmont Park's fall meeting.

Belmont's fall meeting will be held from September 15 to October 1.

The race will be held at a mile and a quarter under weight-for-age conditions unless the owners agree on some other weight arrangements.

At the same time, Riddle declared he was willing that Howard should choose whichever post position he prefers and that the race should be run only over a good track in view of the fact that Seabiscuit is not at his best in the mud. War Admiral's owner likewise suggested that a walk-up start, rather than stall gates be used. A bad actor at the post, War Admiral, never has taken kindly to stall gates.

Both Get of Man o' War.

It will be son of Man o' War against grandson of Man o' War when War Admiral and Seabiscuit clash at Belmont Park. It will be War Admiral, always highly regarded by his handlers, against Seabiscuit, a cast-off of a good stable and sold for $7,500. It will be 4-year-old against 5-year-old. In size there will be little to choose, with War Admiral slightly heavier than his rival. It will be an East Coast horse against a West Coast horse, although both were bred in the East.

Samuel D. Riddle, owner of the Glen Riddle Farm, is the breeder of War Admiral, who is out of the mare Brush Up. Seabiscuit was bred by the Wheatley Stable by Hard Tack, a useful son of Man o' War, and out of Swing On.

First talk of a meeting between War Admiral and Seabiscuit began after the former, led his fields in the Kentucky Derby and Preakness, Seabiscuit, beaten a nose by Rosemont in the $100,000 added Santa Anita Handicap in 1937, was running up a string of victories at the time. C. S. Howard, his owner, wanted a crack at the Admiral.

Declined Laurel Stakes.

However, War Admiral went on to win his engagement in the Belmont Stakes and complete his Derby-Preakness-Belmont trio. War Admiral was injured in that race and while he was recuperating the possibility of a War Admiral-Sea Biscuit meeting was fanned by the press and race followers. While Seabiscuit was defeated in the mud at the Narraganset Special, it was believed that the two might clash in Maryland when both were shipped to Laurel.

War Admiral spent most of the meeting working out and when the Laurel Stakes, for which both were eligible, came up, War Admiral's handlers declined to let him meet Seabiscuit. In that race, Heel Fly added something to the ointment by running "Biscuit" to a dead heat.

In the Washington Stakes, War Admiral went to the post but this time, Seabiscuit's handlers kept their charge in the barn.

Pimlico tried to provide the setting for the temperamental owners. Alfred Gwynne Vanderbilt arranged a special for them, but when the start came, War Admiral was without Seabiscuit's opposition. It was well that the Derby winner didn't meet Seabiscuit that day, for War Admiral appeared to have been a beaten horse before Masked General, leading by two lengths entering the stretch, ran to the outside fence.

This Morning

Sheriff Dave Harris Is Now Batting for Law.

By Shirley Povich.

Atlanta, Ga., April 8.—The man who would have been the late Ring Lardner's favorite ball player is no longer in the big leagues, but he is still in uniform—in the uniform of the Atlanta Police Department.

POVICH.

Dave Harris is wearing badge No. 650—"My batting average against left - handed pitching when I was in the majors," he says. "I held out for this number. Thought it would be a nice little reminder."

During his eight years in the majors, Sheriff Harris was the living prototype of Lardner's famous Jack O. Keefer character—loud, on the surface a colossal egoist, a supreme alibi artist, a bit on the hill-billy side, perhaps, but with more than a spark of baseball talent.

One of the great surprises of Sheriff Harris' life was that a fellow could actually get paid for playing baseball. He didn't make that discovery until after he had been giving away his talents for several years in the town games back in his North Carolina hills. The Sheriff never bickered about his contracts. Deep down, he knew he would play ball for the sheer fun of it. If they wanted to pay him, well, that made it perfect. Anyway, the Sheriff's name never figured in any squabbles about salary. He was never a holdout.

In one year when, by an oversight, Clark Griffith forgot to mail the Sheriff a contract, he was very forcibly reminded of his forgetfulness. The door burst open in Griffith's Washington office one morning, and it was the Sheriff in very much of a dither.

"You ain't thinkin' of releasin' me, are ya, Griff?" the Sheriff demanded to know. "You ain't sent me no contract yet, you know. I'm willin' to take a cut if you say. I like this Washington club and ——"

But Griffith, who was already hunting through the desk for the contract he thought had been sent Harris, finally found it. The Sheriff grabbed a pen from the Nats' owner's hands, and without looking at the salary figures, scribbled his name on the dotted line. Not until later did he realize that he had been given a substantial raise in salary in recognition of the fact that he had led all the pinch hitters in the league.

* * * *

Big Dave could hit left-hand pitching, there was no doubt of that. Against right-handers, he was something of a sucker, but the southpaws of the league held the Sheriff in high respect. Grove and Gomez presented no problems to the Sheriff. "Those two guys are keeping me in the league," Dave used to boast.

But it was another pitching star who, indirectly, brought to the Sheriff his greatest fame. Tommy Bridges, of the Tigers, was on the threshold of the Hall of Fame against the Nats one July day in 1932. For eight and two third innings, he had pitched hitless ball. One more out and he would own a no-hit game.

The Tigers were leading the Nats, 9-0, but Manager Walter Johnson was determined that Bridges would have to earn his no-hit game. He sent the Sheriff in as a pinch-hitter. Dave didn't dally. On Bridges' first pitch he it. Throw that ball behind his

Dunlap Plays For 6th Title

Meets Strafaci Today at Pinehurst.

Pinehurst, N. C., April 8 (AP).—George T. Dunlap, jr., of Pinehurst, the 1933 national amateur champion, and Frank Strafaci, of Brooklyn, N. Y., former national public links champion, won difficult semi-final matches today and will meet over a 36-hole route tomorrow for the North and South amateur golf championship.

Dunlap, five times a winner of the North and South title, got off to a bad start but rallied before the turn and defeated Morton McCarthy, of Virginia Beach, Va., 2 and 1.

One down at the turn, Strafaci on the soggy home nine overcame repeated recoveries of Charlie Clare, of New Haven, Conn., former New England champion, and won 1 up.

McCarthy shot pars to win the first two holes from Dunlap, they three-putted and halved the third, but Dunlap reduced the margin by taking the fourth with a 15-foot putt. They halved the next two and Dunlap squared the match at the seventh with another 15-foot putt and went one up when McCarthy three-putted at the eighth.

Dunlap's birdie 3 at No. 11 and McCarthy's costly five at No. 13 sent the former champion 3 up, but the Virginian won the fourteenth with a 15-foot putt and added the fifteenth, where Dunlap was bunkered. Dunlap laid a stymie and won the seventeenth to close out of the match.

First Twin Bill.

San Antonio, Tex., April 8 (AP).—Something new in spring training will be introduced here Sunday afternoon when the St. Louis Browns and the Chicago Cubs engage in a double-header to play off the game postponed today by cold weather.

A Modern Annie Oakley

Pitted against some of the best women shots in the country, Miss Eleanor Lum, above, Beaver College (Jenkintown, Pa.) rifle squad member from Madison, N. J., carried off the national women's amateur small bore rifle championship. When the final tabulations were made, Miss Lum scored 599 out of a possible 600 shots at Philadelphia.

100-Yd. Swim To Flanagan

Buckeyes Hold a Wide Lead at Columbus.

By the United Press.

Columbus, Ohio, April 8.—Ralph Flanagan, powerful aquatic star from the Miami (Fla.) Biltmore Club, overcame a five-year jinx tonight when he won the 100-yard free style championship in the national A. A. U. swimming meet.

Flanagan negotiated the distance in 2:10.9, to win his first indoor title since 1933. His time was three-tenths of a second off the world and American record of Jack Medica.

William E. Kendall, of Harvard, was second; John Macionis, of Yale, third; Tom Haynie, of Michigan, the national intercollegiate titlist, fourth; Charles Hutter, of Harvard, the 1937 king, fifth, and Otto Jaretz, Chicago school boy, sixth.

Jack Kasley, of the University of Michigan, dethroned John Higgins, of Ohio State, as the 220-yard breast stroke king. Kasley, in front from the start, was timed in 2:40, one and six-tenths seconds slower than his own American record.

Higgins finished second; R. R. Hough, of Princeton, third; Alex McKee, of Ohio State, fourth; Charles Spangler, of the Penn Athletic Club, fifth, and John Haich, of Michigan, sixth.

Al Patnik, slender Ohio State sophomore, became the first 1937 champion to retain a championship when he took the low board diving title with a point total of 148.17.

Ohio State University rolled up 25 points to take a commanding lead in the team championship, the Bucks holding a 13-point edge over Michigan as the Nations' aquatic stars took time out until tomorrow, when the remaining five events will be held.

The Bucks gained 12 points with a startling win over Michigan's defending champs in the 400-yard free style relay, Neunzig of Ohio, outswimming Ed Kirar, the national collegiate 50 and 100 yard free style champion, on the anchor leg, to win by a short nose.

Ohio State's 400-yard free-style relay team missed the world record by a tenth of a second as it clipped off a victory in 3:31.58 to win from Michigan's defending champions.

William Neunzig, Ohio anchor man, more than held his own against Ed Kirar, Michigan's 50-yard and 100-yard national collegiate free-style champion, to win by about a yard. Haryard was third and Ohio State's No. 2 team fourth.

Andrew Clark, unattached 20-year-old Detroit, High School student, dethroned Higgins as 300-yard individual medley champion with a 3:31.3 performance, two and one-half seconds over the American record set by Higgins in 1935.

Brookland Boys Stage Brisk Bouts

With Dave Bernstein, national intercollegiate 115-pound champion and Leo Katalinas, runner-up in the heavyweight division, judging, the Michigan Park Boys Club staged its annual bi-monthly boxing show last night. A capacity crowd packed the arena, located in the basement of the Smooth residence, 4016 Twelfth street, northeast.

A 70-pound bout between Mike Gray and Walter Hart, visiting from the Friendship Club, featured the program. It ended in a draw. Matchmaker Charles Wilson announced that a re-match will be sought. Complete results:

50 pounds—David Johnson drew with Bob Jackson. 55 pounds—Lawrence Horan defeated George Smoot. 50 pounds—Skippy Speaker drew with Billy Sheehan. 65 pounds—Frankie Sheehan defeated Junior Sullivan. 70 pounds—Mike Gray drew with Walter Hart. 75 pounds—John O'Keefe drew with Billy Wesler. Tommy O'Keefe drew with Joe LaBille. 80 pounds—Jewett Klein defeated Billy Keeler. 100 pounds—Johnny Girardi defeated Joe Manley.

Rus Wins Award.

Jan Rus, 11, won his Eagle athletic award in Troop One last night.

Goslin May Win Berth As Regular Outfielder

Failure of Almada, Simmons and Case to Hit May Elevate Veteran to Daily Duty.

By Shirley Povich.
A Staff Correspondent.

Atlanta, April 8.—Leon Allen Goslin, the 37-year-old outfielder who was more tolerated than esteemed a month ago when he humbly sought a contract with the Nats, is now high in favor of the Washington Club's bosses—so high, in fact, that he is the second ranking outfielder on the team.

In the wake of rising doubts of the efficiency of other Washington outfielders, promotion has come rapidly to Goslin. The other day, Manager Bucky Harris announced that the Goose would play regularly against right-handed pitching. At this writing, Harris is in a mood to play Goslin against any kind of pitching.

Johnny Stone, the .300 hitter of last season, is the only outfielder on the club who now outranks Goslin. Mel Almada, the fixture of 1937, has fallen from grace with his failure to hit in the exhibition games. Al Simmons, who was supposed to add punch to the Nats outfield, hasn't. Young George Case is as yet untried. Taft Wright is fated for a utility role, if he is retained.

Slugging Like Star.

Goslin has demonstrated that he is a well-preserved 37-year-old, with at least one more year of big league baseball ahead of him. The manner in which the Goose has been swinging his bat in the South is more than faintly reminiscent of the slugging gent who helped bring three pennants to the Nats.

If only by contrast with the puny efforts of Simmons, Almada and Case, Goslin has been an impressive sight at the plate. He still swings with all his old-time gusto, he's still a shrewd judge of pitching, and there is always the feeling that the Goose has the edge on the pitcher.

Harris announcement that Goslin would play against right-handed pitching is believed to be only the opening wedge in his plan to start the Goose in all games. Always a tactful fellow, the Nats' manager does not care to let the blow fall too heavily on his other outfielder aspirants.

Can Hit Southpaws.

But the fact remains that Goslin never was any set-up against southpaw pitching. He has been one of the few left-handed hitters who could slug southpaws with equal facility. When Harris says Goslin will play against right-handers, he may infer that the Goose is weak against southpaws, but he hardly means it.

Harris is moved to give Goslin a regular berth on the theory that his pitching this season will not be so tight that he can afford to sacrifice any hitting power. The Goose may cover less ground than the other outfield candidates, but little less than Simmons.

As the Nats' line-up now stands, Stone and Goslin are the only pair who own regular jobs. Simmons and Case must battle it out for the third post. Almada, who holds a huge edge on the defense, has that in his favor, but must show more hitting power. Simmons, still spry in the outfield, must still prove that he can come back as a hitter. Young Case, improved on the defense, is plagued by his wild swinging at the plate.

Caught by the fringe of a storm that took 13 lives 65 miles to the north, the Nats were rained out of their scheduled exhibition game with the Atlanta Crackers here today. Dutch Leonard, the knuckleball pitcher, who was to take the mound against his erstwhile Atlanta mates, will get another starting assignment on Sunday at Charlotte.

The Nats entrained tonight for Greenville, S. C., where they resume their series with the local South Atlantic league club. Monte Weaver will pitch and then take

Londos Matched With Dr. Murphy Here on Thursday

Jim Lindos, the glamorous Greek who ruled the mat world with an iron grip several years ago and brought prosperity to the promoters, returns to the scene of some of his earlier triumphs next week when he features Joe Turner's weekly mat show at the Arena. Londos' opponent will be the popular Irishman, Dr. John Murphy.

Claimant of the "world international" title since returning to this country, Londos remains one of the game's best drawing cards and most popular performers. He won more than 200 consecutive matches during his reign as heavyweight champion, finally bowing to Danno O'Mahoney at Boston. Londos is best remembered for his "airplane spin," finishing touch to all of his winning efforts.

Murphy has risen to high esteem among Washington fans because of his colorful work here during the winter. A handsome and clean cut wrestler, he has yet to bow in a local bout. A one and a half hour draw with Jesse James is the lone smirch on his record.

Field Trials Off.

Cedar Run Field Trials for dogs under the merit system of judging were canceled yesterday by rain. They will be run Monday (April 11), at the L. W. Trenis farm two miles from Cutlett, Va.

Hoyas Take Golf Match

G. U. Beats Cornell, 6-0, in Its First Start.

Georgetown University's golf team—comprised of four local youths who between them have won virtually every championship in this section—shutout Cornell University's linksmen by a 6-to-0 margin yesterday at Congressional in its first match of the season.

The Hoya stars, Billy Shea and Billy Dettweiler, of Congressional, and Maury Nee and Harvey Johnson, of Columbia, were not pressed in dealing the Ithacans their second defeat in two days. They lost to Swarthmore by a 3½-to-2½ margin Thursday.

Shea, District and Middle Atlantic champion, shot fine golf, considering the cold and rainy conditions, playing the first nine in 1 under par 36 and going 2 over on the back nine for a 37 and 73. He won by a 3-and-2 margin over Charles Willcox, after holding a three-hole advantage at the turn.

Nee, playing with Shea, trounced Fritz Reimer by a 5-and-4 margin with a 76, while the Hoyas won the best ball by a 3-and-2 count.

Dettweiler and Johnson each shot 75s and paired to win the best ball in their match by a 7 and 5 margin. Dettweiler, out in 39 and back in 36, 1 over par, defeated Mike Sutla, 5 and 4, while Johnson, playing the second nine in par 35 after going out in 40, won, 6 and 4, over Coley Asinof.

The matches were never in doubt after the first nine. Nee and Johnson were 3 up and Johnson 5 up, while the best ball in the Johnson-Dettweiler foursome was 6 up at the turn, with Nee and Shea holding a 3-hole advantage.

Shea, Dettweiler and Nee, who led the team in the 72-hole qualifying trials, will leave today for White Sulphur Springs, where they will compete in the Mason and Dixon Amateur. The field is expected to include al the amateur stars who played in the Augusta masters and North-South tourneys, in addition to several other nationally ranked players.

The trio will play a practice round Sunday and start the qualifying rounds on Monday.

The next team match is with St. Joseph's of Philadelphia, April 26, on a local course.

That is what Earl Sande seems to be saying as he sees Stagehand, his 3-year-old star, off to the Kentucky Derby. The winner of the $100,000 Santa Anita Handicap and $50,000 Anita Derby left Los Angeles yesterday in a private car.

Sutherland, Tansey Win

Gene Sutherland, versatile Wilson High swimmer, and Ted Tansey, Western aquatic ace, proved to be the topnotchers of their respective schools in the Western-Wilson Pentathlons held in the Central Y. M. C. A. pool yesterday.

Figured along the general theory of golf in the way of scoring, a low score indicating greater skill than a high one, Sutherland's 12⅓ points easily paced the Wilson lads. Tansey's superiority over his Western mates was even more decisive, the free-style star holding his score to a measly 7 points.

Struble and Miller took second and third places in the Wilson event with 23 and 24 points, respectively, while Capt. Lemly and Flemming copped the same honors in the Western meet with 8 and 18 points.

Western.

50-yard free style—Won by Lemly; second, Tansey; third, Flemming. Time, 26.7 secs.

Dog Flower Captures Bowie Feature Race by Three Lengths in Mud

Walter Haight

When Samuel D. Riddle, owner of War Admiral, announced in Florida a few weeks ago that he would not start his champion in Maryland again, he was quoted as saying: "I'm going to race War Admiral in New York, where starters show more respect for my horse."

HAIGHT.

Later, word drifted North that Riddle was referring to the use of pinchers on War Admiral in Maryland.

Of course, this could have been a reason for War Admiral passing up his home grounds. The truth probably is that Riddle already had an agreement with Joseph E. Widener whereby Belmont Park would stage a meeting with Seabiscuit.

Yesterday I located the man who had charge of every start that War Admiral has made in the Old Line State. Jim Milton, veteran of the barriers and starting gates, was pulling on his hip boots prior to going out in the driving rain to get the Bowie program under way.

"You know," he said, "I can't make myself believe that Mr. Riddle made a statement criticising my handling of War Admiral. I have started horses belonging to Mr. Riddle for some 20 years. I sent Man o' War away from the barrier, and Crusader, Big Blaze and all the others. In all that time he has said nothing regarding my starting, and we have been the best of friends."

* * * * *

I had cornered Milton for the purpose, so I put the "pinchers" question to him. Were they used on War Admiral in his Maryland starts?

"Most assuredly," came back Milton, "where I believed that he might injure himself at the gate. In War Admiral's case, we used pinchers on him in every start after he came back to us from winning the Derby. Mr. Riddle never issued an order or inferred that pinchers were not to be used on the colt. In fact, I had no idea of using them the day of the Preakness. War Admiral came to the post crying to run. He kept lunging through the gate and swerving this way and that. After he had run through several times, I looked at Jockey Kurtsinger and I said, 'We better use something on him, what do you think?' Kurtsinger agreed and so I ordered the assistant starter to apply the device."

* * * * *

To the uninformed, pinchers is the name given a contraption that fits in the nostrils of the horse. The more he squirms, the tighter becomes the grip. When the thing is released at the bell it contracts and drops to the ground.

Milton looked at the rain beating against the window and continued, "Remember, as I said before, I just can't make myself believe Mr. Riddle said these things. But he cannot say that War Admiral was not treated with respect. In fact, the only time that War Admiral did not break first as the field came out of the gates, he was second and was in front before he reached the flag.

"Another thing, in addition, to getting away well, War Admiral was not injured in anyway in Maryland. Perhaps it was just a coincidence that the colt was injured in his only start in New York. Of course, I did not give War Admiral a running start at my gate. After all, he was a horse and in a horse race and he deserved just what I try to give all horses—a shot at the bell."

* * * * *

The saddle bell rang. I looked for that to end the interview, but Milton carried on and, knowing that the show wouldn't start without him, I was a willing listener.

"Certainly is funny," he continued, "that there should be the subject of pinchers brought up in regard to Mr. Riddle. About seven or eight years ago he had a very unruly horse and he sent me out a new style of pincher to be used on his horse. We used it and it worked well. He allowed me to keep them. When I was starting in Massachusetts, the Humane Society asked to be allowed to pass on all equipment used in starting horses. We agreed to rule out any that did not meet with approval. All the various devices were examined and the only one ruled out was the set of pinchers Mr. Riddle had given me. Looks like I'll have to get over to the start now. See you later."

When informed that Belmont Park definitely had gotten War Admiral and Seabiscuit in line for a match race next fall, Maryland officials frowned. They believe that the match race, especially for $100,000, will do racing more harm than good. It was the consensus of opinion that it will take sportsmanship out of racing and that it will lead to owners of great horses in the future keeping them in the barn and waiting for the highest bidder.

General Manager Joseph B. Boyle said: "I would not offer $100,000 for any race, even if Bowie were big enough to accommodate the crowds that such a race will draw. I would rather spread the money over the meeting and give other good horses a crack at it."

Pays $3.70; Torchlight Takes Place

Hazel Nut Runs Third in Feature; Daily Double Is $145.50.

By Walter Haight.

A Staff Correspondent.

Bowie Race Track, April 8.—With outboard motors and life-preservers more appropriate equipment than boots and saddles, the racing show went on here this afternoon here before 3,500 hardy souls. Virtually swimming in a canal, the bangtails circled the oval, slower perhaps than usual, but they circled just the same, while the ever-present wagering went on, under the stands. A cold rain, however, failed to dampen the enthusiasm of the favorite player, who has ceased to be the forgotten man hereabouts and his heart was warm despite the nor'easter that whistled across the grandstand.

It was the odds-on favorite, Dog Flower which turned back the opposition in the day's feature race, the Fuss Farm purse, by three and a half lengths. The Millsdale Stable filly, who made her turf debut with a victory here a week ago, was capably handled by Jockey Charlie Corbett, leading jockey at this meeting.

Torchlight and Hazle Nut followed the daughter of Bull Dog to the pay-off station, while Tedmelia, Clock-Fixer and Bindy formed the local No. 411, Sons of Also Rans.

Dog Flower produced a $3.70 mutuel, a sample of how much confidence the public can get in favorites after they have been clicking with regularity.

The daily double was a different story. The chosen few who teamed Petit Jean with Galon Boy collected $145.60.

Petit Jean, running in the black and white of R. R. Dickman, came out of the pack to take the first race at a $24.10 mutuel. The little daughter of Jean Valjean finished a length and a half ahead of Affirmation, another long shot. Bryonin, the favorite, wound up in third place.

Here's Mud in Your Eye . . . . . They Like It . . . . . What to Wear at Bowie

The photo at the left shows what happens to a jockey when his horse is not a good mudder. J. Shanks, who had the mount on Country Jim in the first race at Bowie yesterday can tell you all about mud packs. His horse finished sixth. The center panel shows Blox (left), sloshing to a victory over Standard Time in the fourth event. These babies had a mud battle all their own. Starter Jim Milton shows what the well-dressed Bowie fan should wear. Walter Haight, Post race writer, tells more about Starter Milton in column one of this page.

PETIT JEAN, allowed to settle into best stride, circled horses to better position approaching stretch and, under driving tactics, disposed of BRYONIN to draw out. AFFIRMATION, first away, was rated when BRYONIN went to front, rallied to intermittent punishment, but was held safe by winner. BRYONIN appeared sore going to post, was rushed to front on inside leaving backstretch and tired.

SECOND RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall gates. Won handily; place driving. Went to post 3:02. Off 3:04½. Winner, R. A. Coward's ch. g. Two-dollar mutuels paid—BLOX, $6.20, $3.50, $2.40; STANDARD TIME, $5.00, $2.60; LOVICK, $2.10.

BLOX, outrun for a half, went to outside for racing room, improved position sharply to take command leaving backstretch and under punishment held STANDARD TIME safe in final drive. The latter, forward factor from start, closed gamely.

FIFTH RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $1,000; allowances. The Fuss Farm. For 3-year-old fillies. Start poor from stall gates. Won driving; place same. Went to post 4:31. Off 4:32. Winner, Millsdale Stable's b. f. (3), by Bull Dog—Chic Flora. Trained by A. Pelleteri. Value to winner, $700; second, $175; third, $100; fourth, $25. Time, 1:15.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—DOG FLOWER, $3.70, $2.50, $2.20; TORCHLIGHT, $3.60, $2.30; HAZEL NUT, $3.50.

DOG FLOWER, steadied along while close to TORCHLIGHT'S pace and on the outside, went to front midway of stretch under driving tactics and was kept under pressure while opening gap. TORCHLIGHT beat the gate, opened a good lead and continued gamely, but was no match for the winner. HAZEL NUT broke well and tired in closing test.

SIXTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall gates. Won driving; place same. Went to post 5:00. Off 5:00. Winner, L. Romm's dk. b. or br. c. (4), by Witchmont—Trojie. Trained by L. Haymaker. Value to winner, $700; second, $175; third, $100; fourth, $25. Time, 1:52 1-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—SURPRISE BOX, $8.60, $4.00, $2.60; HIGH TENSION, $2.60, $2.10; ALBERT D., $3.10.

SURPRISE BOX, off in front, saved ground while setting pace, opened a gap in stretch, but had to be ridden out to stave off closing bid of HIGH TENSION. The latter was blocked while making move approaching stretch, came to outside for drive and was wearing down winner at finish.

SEVENTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall gates. Won handily; place same. Went to post 5:27. Off 5:34. Winner, Mrs. E. Two-dollar mutuels paid—SUNCRAX, $13.30, $7.30, $5.50; POPO, $26.20, $13.80; NADIR, $3.40.

SUNCRAX, fractious at post and started outside gates, was sent to front under hustling tactics going to backstretch, opened a good lead and finished with speed in reserve. POPO followed the pace throughout and showed good effort.

With Bill Bennings.

DEAR AL:

Jockey Tommy Fowler got a free mud-pack in the second race. He was riding Muckle Do, a gelding which stumbled after he crossed the finish line. Fowler went over his head into the mud, but he was not hurt. Whitey Pembleton, news service employe, was figuring on buying a yacht after Petit Jean took the first race. With a $22 investment he had hooked up all the horses in the second race with the $24.10 winner of the first race in the daily double. He had the only ticket sold ending in Pampered and he had a possible pay-off of $8,737.50 staring him in the face. Three other combinations were over the 52,000 mark. With the double locked up, the favorite had to take the second race, Pembleton collecting $145.60, the shortest price on the list. Bowie's program today is topped by the first running of the $3,500 added Bowie Handicap, a test of a mile and 70 yards. Nine horses were named overnight. Sun Egret, winner of the Rowe Memorial here and third in last winter's Santa Anita Derby, is the probable favorite. The Kentucky Derby hope meets among others, Piccolo, Challephen, Parmelee T. and Moonside. Some of the other star eligibles, including Aneroid, did not enter due to the probable sticky track. Jockey Knott is the latest boy to join the local riding colony. It's cold and it's damp.

Abrams Tapers Off for His Return Bout With Jones

In This Corner

By Jack Cuddy.

New York, April 8.—There is no crepe hanging on the door of the National League's publicity bureau, despite all the things that were published recently in magazines about the fading of the Senior Circuit—as compared to the American League.

When I entered the Bureau's door, I inquired of Bill Brandt, "Where'se the black crepe garland?"

Roly-Poly Brandt, publicity man of the National League, was sitting at his desk puffing a pipe and beaming all over the place. He said, "What crepe garland are you talking about?"

I said, "I figured you'd have a lot of black silk on the door knob to commemorate the passing of the National League into the International League or American Association."

* * * *

Brandt chuckled, shoved his blue hat back on his sparse, brownish-gray hair, and said, "Pay no attention to those magazine pieces. The boys are just having a lot of fun. Listen I'm happier than a kid in a jar of new jam because there never was a time in the last 20 years when the National League seemed so improved from the addition of minor league stars. We've got a lot more good players coming up this season than the American. I think we're setting some sort of a record for rookies who will start in the lineups when the season opens."

Right off, Brandt picked out the Brooklyn Dodgers. He singled them out as the most improved club in his circuit. He pointed to Durocher from the Cards at second base, and Camilli from the Phillies at first base, and Lavagetto at third, shifted from his '37 post of second sacking, and Coscaret—a rookie from the Portland, Oregon, club—at second base. He also pointed out that Goodwin Rosen, from the Louisville club, probably would become the Dodgers' regular center fielder, and that Buddy Hassett, who played first in '37, probably would play in the Dodgers' outfield also.

Going to the other extreme, Brandt said the New York Giants probably was the only club that would start the season with a line-up of '37 regulars—regardless of whether Burgess Whitehead, second baseman, is ready for play.

"The Giants may have one or two new pitchers," Brandt admitted. "But I am not talking about pitchers now."

Among the Boston Bees there would be Rookie Max West from the San Francisco Missions, who promised to make good as a right fielder, replacing Gene Moore who has an injured back.

At Pittsburgh, Outfielder Johnny Rizzo, a $45,000 beauty from the Columbus club, is virtually certain to start with the two Waner brothers. With the Cincinnati Reds, Frank McCormick, who played most of the '37 with Syracuse but who wound up the season with the Reds, appears to have clinched the first-base job. Harry Craft and Lee Gamble will grab one outfield job between them—or maybe two. Craft and Gamble each spent half of the '37 season with Waterloo, Iowa, and half with Syracuse, N. Y. They exchanged places on the two clubs, and both did so well that both were brought up to the Reds for this season. Although both led the Western League at bat, Craft right now seems to have the better chance to start in the opening line-up.

With the Cubs, Outfielder Coaker Triplett, from the Memphis club, batting champion of the Southern Association, seems to have a picket job sewed up. And it is possible that Steve Mesner, from the Los Angeles Angels, will secure the third-base job, necessitating a shift of Stanley Hack to second or some place.

* * * *

Likewise Max Macon from Columbus seems to have the best chance to become a rotator with the Cards; Dick Errickson from Scranton, with the Bees; and Buck Marrow of Louisville, and Bill Posedel, of Portland, with the Dodgers.

"I pay no attention to those magazine articles. But maybe it's timely that all these youngsters are coming up in a bunch," Brandt said. "We're getting a bigger shot of new blood this time than in any season I can remember. Watch what that new blood does to our circuit."

Boxes Scott And Thomas Five Rounds

District Middleweight Is Hopeful of Defeating Baltimorean.

By Lewis F. Atchison.

George Abrams yesterday completed the heaviest portion of his training for Monday night's bout with Jimmy Jones, of Baltimore, stepping three brisk rounds with Howard Scott and two more with Buddy Thomas at the Huron gym.

He lathered the light bag a couple of rounds and worked two more on the heavy bag to test the power of his punching, and topped it all off with a session of rope-skipping. He looks great physically but a little worried. But if Jones stops him again it will not be because the local Jewish middleweight is not prepared.

From Baltimore, Heine Blaustein, Jones' pilot, writes that his man is gunning for another knockout victory. He is not viewing the engagement through rose-colored glasses, but actually working harder for it than he worked for their initial bout. He wants to prove that it wasn't a lucky punch he felled Abrams with in that memorable fifth round.

Experience Tells.

"How can you fellows say it was a lucky right-hand punch, a sucker punch Jimmy flattened Abrams with, when he was trying to land one from the first round on? He waited for an opening and when he got it threw the right hand and connected. What's so lucky about that? It was good ring generalship, not a lucky break. He used his experience against a greener kid, and experience will win for him again. Of course, that right hand will have a lot to do with it," he concluded.

"Abrams is strictly in the middle on this fight. He can't well afford to lose—not to mention be knocked out again, without slipping to the bottom of the fistic ladder. A defeat would send him back to where he was a year ago, when he first turned pro, erasing all of his 17 victories and blotting him out as a boxoffice attraction. He can ill-afford that.

Cries of 'Fake.'

If he wins there will be cries of "Fake; Jones took a dive, etc.," and the fans will never be convinced he is the better man. Abrams doesn't pack enough kick in either glove to flatten Jones, a very tough lad, and doesn't seem to have enough stamina to withstand the Baltimorean's steady blasting of the midsection. He doesn't figure to win any way you look at it, and that means he'll wind up holding the bag.

You can wager your last dollar if Mr. Jones hits the canvas it will be legitimate, because he and his brother, Ivan Nedomatsky, take their prize-fighting very seriously—especially with a Washington fighter involved.

Goslin's Hits May Win Job

leave to visit his ill mother at his North Carolina home.

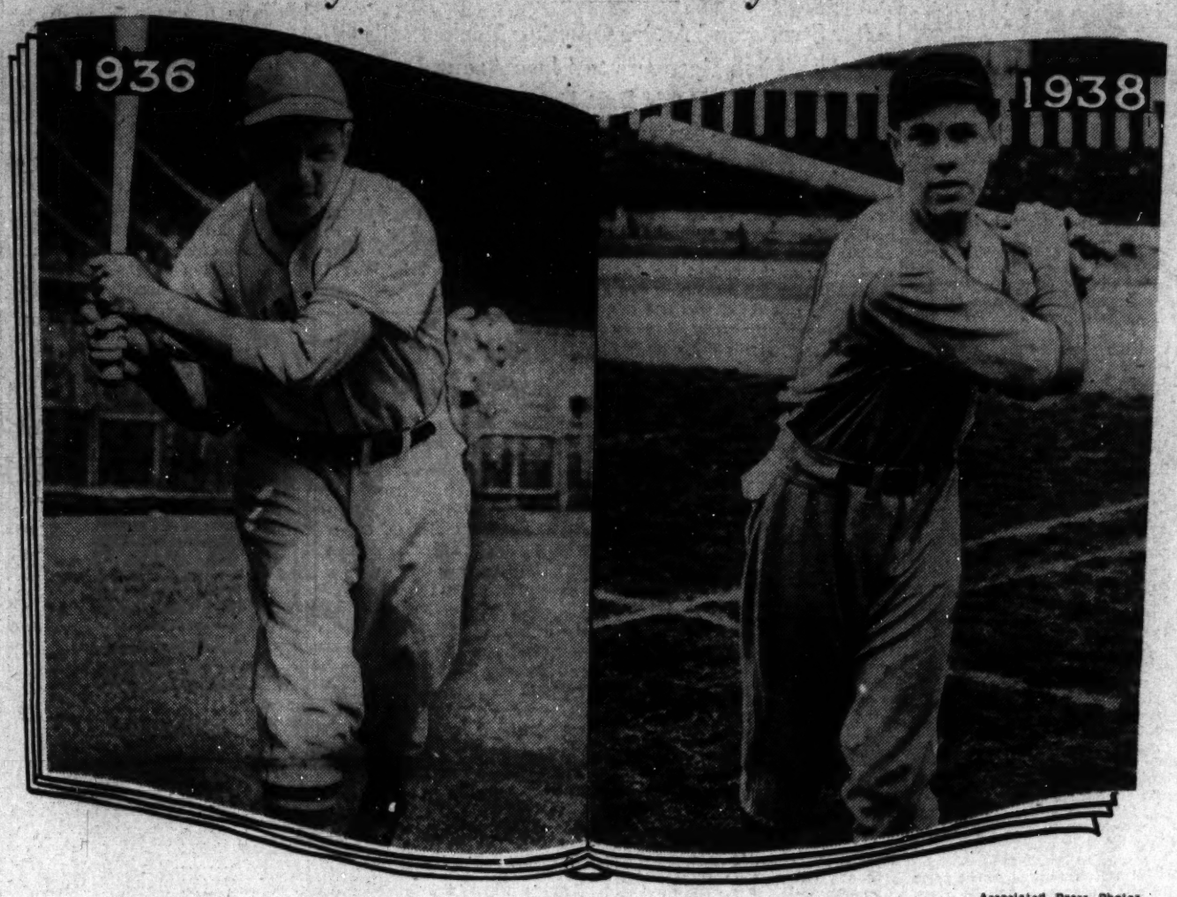
Because the Sunday baseball law failed to pass in Charlotte, N. C., the Nats will play their Charlotte farmhands a contest that will be free to the public. Thus, this one time at least, the fans will get their money's worth.

Zeke Bonura, who made the mistake of packing his overcoat in his trunk when he left the warm climate of Orlando, realized his error today when the Atlanta temperature fell to 37 degrees. He rectified it by going shopping and returning with a $6.95 job that really looks to be worth at least 12 bucks.

Luke Appling, White Sox shortstop, who broke his ankle in training two weeks ago, has abandoned all hope that he will return to the lineup before July. Appling, who is visiting with his father, a wood carver, at his Atlanta home, is on crutches.

"It will be weeks before they take off the cast," said Appling. "I won't even be able to start getting into condition until this thing heals completely—unless I can manage to work out on one leg. And I understand that's tough," he smiled.

The Old Family Album: Another Terry Takes to Baseball!



Associated Press Photos.

One of the principal mainstays of the University of Virginia's baseball team this year is Bill Terry, jr., son of the manager of the National League Champion New York Giants. Young Bill alternates on the mound and at second base. He is shown on the right, almost a miniature of his famous dad, shown in an action picture taken two years ago, on the left. A sophomore, young Bill is in his first year of varsity competition and shows promise of becoming a big leaguer.

singled cleanly into left field and the pitcher's no-hit dreams vanished.

"I kinda hated to do it," said Dave, "but orders is orders. Johnson sent me up there to hit and there wasn't much I could do about it."

* * * *

It was Davie Harris who bawled out Bobby Burke one day for pitching a home run ball to Babe Ruth that cost the Nats a cruicial game during the 1933 pennant race. "You shouldn't have thrown him that high fast one," the Sheriff told Burke. "That's no way to pitch to Ruth."

"All right smarty how would you have pitched to him?" Burke demanded.

"Me"? asked Harris, stalling for an idea. "Anybody knows how to pitch to Ruth. Pitch inside, that's back. That's one way to stop him."

The Sheriff came to the Nats from the White Sox along with Art Shires in 1930 for a couple of years he was deeply worried by Shires' insistence that Harris was merely tossed into the deal by the White Sox as something extra, that Washington's big object was to get Shires.

"Now why would a man want to lie like that," the Sheriff used to ask.

Dave's greatest fear always was that a pitcher would strike him out. He prided himself on his ability to get a piece of the ball, to hit those long flies, at least, if he didn't a base hit. He'd argue long and loudly if they called a strike on him.

It happened one day in Philadelphia, the umpire said, calmly, "strike three," as Harris watched a slow curve drop over the plate.

"No," shouted Harris.

"Yes," said the umpire.

"It was high," yelled Harris.

"No," said the umpire.

"It was low," boomed Harris.

"No," said the umpire.

"It was wide," thundered Harris.

"No," said the umpire.

Said Harris, "all right then, I guess you win."

Ettore Bows To Adamick

Kearn's Protege Takes 10-Round Decision.

By the Associated Press.

Detroit, April 8.—Jimmy Adamick, young Midland (Mich.) heavyweight protege of Jack Kearns, hammered his way to a ten-round decision over Al Ettore, veteran Philadelphian, at Olympia Stadium tonight. Both battlers weighed 192 pounds.

Adamick scored the only knockdown of the fracas when he put over a bristling right that sent Ettore spinning out of the ring into the laps of newspapermen in the fifth round. The Philadelphian was back in the ring at the count of seven and fought Adamick on even terms the rest of the way.

For the most part the bout was a battle of left hands. Except for the fifth round, Ettore was never in distress. Adamick did not appear jarred at any stage of the battle.

The program attracted a crowd of 9,871, and gross receipts of $15,098.

Goldstone Wins In Squash Match

Composing the slimmest program of the tournament to date, last night's third-round play in the District A. A. U. Squash tourney substituted quality for quantity with a general display of more determined competition.

In the first three-game match of the week, C. T. Lane defeated Robert Rawson, 15-7, 13-15, 15-13. Abner Goldstone defeated Charles Koester, 15-5, 16-13, and Lieut. William Howard defeated Howland Sargeant, 15-9, 1513.

Four tilts this afternoon will complete the third-round play. Goldstone meets Gilbert Hunt at 2 o'clock; Stanley McCaskey faces Philip Herrick at 2:45, and John Pratt meets Thomas Murray at the same hour, while Richard O'Connor and Hugh Lynch clash at 3:30 to complete the program.

Grimes Picks Dodgers As Seventh-Place Club

Clearwater, Fla., April 8 (AP).—Burleigh Grimes, manager of the Brooklyn Dodgers, surprised baseball writers today by picking his own team to finish no better than seventh in the coming National League race.

Perhaps with tongue in his cheek, Burleigh picked the Dodgers to finish behind the Chicago Cubs, St. Louis Cardinals, New York Giants, Pittsburgh Pirates, Cincinnati Reds and Boston Bees, in that order. He said he thought the Dodgers would beat out only the Phillies.

Roosevelt Nips Powell In C. C. Court Play

Roosevelt Boys Club advanced into the 145-pound semi-final round of the Community Center Boys Club Tournament last night by nosing out Powell, 33-30, at the Powell gym.

Al Katz and Blaine Wicklein scored 11 and 9 points, respectively to lead the winners; John Fanning, with 11 points, and Brother Hurley, with 8, were best for the losers.

Table Tennis Meet Set for Rockville

The second annual Richard Montgomery Tennis Table Tournament will be held next Tuesday and Wednesday in the High School Gymnasium, Rockville, Md., with playing time scheduled to start at 7 p. m.

There will be five events: Men's open singles, men's doubles (Rockville only), women's open singles, women's singles (Rockville only) and women's doubles. The awards include eight silver cups.

'Y' Handball Finals Today

Seven Players Reach Round Unbeaten.

Scoring victories in last night's semifinal round of the all-Y. M. C. A. handball tournament, seven players completed nearly a week of gruelling competition undefeated and earned the right to compete for the Class B and C singles and doubles crowns this afternoon.

Alex Houlon and David Bard will clash for the Class B singles title this afternoon at 2:30, while E. M. English and Murray Collins will meet for the Class C singles crown at 3:30. Collins again enters the picture at 4:30 when he teams with Albert Levin to oppose N. W. Seidner and Fred Carpenter for the Class B doubles trophy.

In last night's Class B singles play David Bard defeated A. E. Yeatman, 21-12, 21-12, and Alex Houlon advanced on a forfeit by J. A. Lomax. The lone Class C singles tilt saw Murray Collins defeating Francis Brechtel, 21-3, 21-14.

N.P.B.A. Committee Reports Received

Improvements along the north side of Washington Channel, scheduled to reach actual working stage within the next ten days, were discussed last night by John A. Remon, president of the American Power Boat Association and chairman of its rivers and harbors committee, at the association's regular monthly meeting at the Willard Hotel.

Among the more immediate improvements will be the elimination of old wharves, which for years have been an eyesore, and the construction of a modern yacht basin which can be enlarged and extended as future needs demand.

All committee organizations for the current year were reported filled with four exceptions. Bill Horn, gold cup driver, of New York City, and George Crouch, of City Island, N. Y., were appointed chairman and vice chairman, respectively, of the certification committee.

The next meeting of the committee will be held May 29 at Atlantic City.

Track Meet Is Postponed

Episcopal High School's scheduled track opener with the University of Maryland freshmen, slated for this afternoon on Hoxton Field, has been postponed until Monday afternoon at 3 o'clock, it was announced today by Athletic Director Bick Cardwell. Officials of the two schools decided not to risk a "wet weather" meet.

No date has been set for the tennis match with Central Hill, which also was scheduled for this afternoon, and the Maroons probably will open their season entertaining St. Alban's here Wednesday afternoon.

Cardwell also said he expected to cancel the scheduled baseball game with Tome Prep tomorrow, inasmuch as the diamond was not expected to be in playing condition by game time.

Family Income In Washington Leads Nation

$3,786 Average Tops New York's $3,401; Connecticut Third, $3,160.

By the Associated Press.

New York, April 8.—Based on national income the average American had $555 of money to spend in 1937 and the average family unit about $2,392, the magazine, Sales Management, estimated today in a survey of the Nation's buying power.

The District of Columbia, the magazine reported, led the Nation with a per family income of $3,786, followed by New York's $3,401. The Connecticut figure was $3,160, Massachusetts $3,089 and Rhode Island $2,962. Michigan and California were tied at $2,898.

It was calculated that the American public had an "effective buying income" of $71,525,065,000, a gain of 71 per cent over the $41,760,000,000 of 1932 and 7 per cent over the $67,000,000,000 of 1936.

This national income, the magazine said, ranked fourth highest in the Nation's history. It was described as the "money actually paid out during the year for goods and services produced and rendered, plus Federal allowances and moneys paid out of the savings and surpluses of business institutions, and adjusted by applying information about living costs, such as the non-money income received by farmers in the form of free rent and produce consumed on the farm."

Curb Cuts Salaries Second Time This Year

New York, April 8 (AP).—The New York Curb Exchange will reduce by 10 per cent the salaries of employes receiving more than $25 a week, the second salary cut this year, it was announced today. The cut is effective tomorrow. The first reductions were 10 to 15 per cent for employes receiving $15 a week or more. The latest cut, it was said, will affect less than 100 employes.

New York, April 8 (AP).—Cotton rallied today on reported plans for a Government spending program. July sold up from 8.52 to 8.63 and closed at 8.57, with final prices 12 to 13 points net higher. The market opened 6 to 12 points higher in response to firm Liverpool cables and on some outstanding buying.

Torrential rains in the central belt and freezing temperatures extending as far south as central Texas were regarded unfavorable for the new crop. A moderate demand encountered a scarcity of contracts. Prices made new highs for the day in the last hour on Wall Street buying which carried the market up to net gains of 15 to 19 points.

Oil Industry Gleams Amid Circling Gloom

Profit Outlook for This Year Better Than in Most Fields, Survey Says.

New York, April 8.—In its weekly summary of the general business situation, the Standard Statistics Co. says today:

"As a result of favorable prospects and an expected continued effective control of production, the domestic petroleum business appears to be one of the few bright spots in the general industrial outlook at the present time.

"Profits of the industry are likely to compare more favorably with th high 1937 totals than those of most other major industries, although a substantial decline in aggregate earnings is indicated. Oil product consumption is expected to hold close to 1937 levels, but the price outlook is relatively unfavorable, except in the crude division. The industry is continuing to make important capital expenditures.

Cut in Crude Likely.

"Despite continued heavy inventories of refined petroleum products, it is not believed that the basic crude oil price will be cut in the next few months. There also appears to be a good chance that the price will not be cut this year, although a definite forecast for so far ahead is not practical in the oil business. There will probably be spotty price weakness in some areas, such as Pennsylvania and Wyoming, and the crude oil structure in California does not appear strong. But the basic mid-continent price, which affects the operations of the great bulk of the industry, is not expected to be changed.

"In the refining division, the price outlook is not so satisfactory. First, there are no direct control forces, such as proration, which operate to regulate refining volume. Without such controls, large inventories of refined products have been accumulated, followed by relatively sharp declines in refined product prices. However, there seems to be little important pressure on crude oil prices as a result of this."

Pump-Priming Possibilities Spur Stocks to Brisk Rally

After Strong and Active Opening Market Sells Off, Then Recovers to Close Around Day's Best Prices.

By Frederick Gardner,
Associated Press Financial Writer.

New York, April 8.—Further reports of Government spending plans to stem the recessionary tide finally took hold on today's stock market, and leading issues rebounded 1 to more than 4 points. The list was moderately higher at o rather slow opening, but a buying rush got under way at the end of the first half hour and, for a brief interval, the ticker tape fell a minute or so behind floor dealings.

The pace quickly slowed and extreme gains were reduced when the President, at his press conference, said no positive decision had been reached regarding an actual outlay for public works expansion. Washington advices had placed the total contemplated at around $1,500,000,000.

Speculative quarters, at the same time, seemed to find fresh inflationary signs on the horizon and another rallying move got under way in the latter part of the session that enabled favorites to close around top levels of the day.

With industrial stocks the most conspicuous on the upturn, the Associated Press average of 60 issues was up 1.5 points at 37.8. This equaled the April 1 recovery, which was the best for any day since January 6. Transfers amounted to 828,290 shares compared with 330,850 Thursday, the latter being the smallest volume for a full day since September 4, 1934.

Strength Is General.

Prominent on the forward swing were United States Steel, at 43⅛; Bethlehem, 45¾; American Telephone, 127⅛; Anaconda, 26⅛; Westinghouse, 72¼; Allied Chemical, 137; Standard Oil of New Jersey, 44⅞; Johns-Manville, 65½; Bethlehem Steel, 45¾; Santa Fe, 27⅛; Chrysler, 42⅝; Douglas Aircraft, 38; General Motors, 30⅛; Sears-Roebuck, 53; Eastman Kodak, 136¾; Loew's, 38.

That the Government spending temperature may be rising was seen in the action of the United States mayors' conference at the Capital in recommending an appropriation by Congress of $3,000,000,000 to give work to the needy unemployed.

In addition notice was taken of the testimony of Works Progress Administrator Harry L. Hopkins before a Senate committee that 18,000,000 men, women and children are now the recipients of public assistance. At the same time the President, while refusing to set a figure for a possible "priming" program, indicated the previously projected $1,000,000,000 for relief in the next fiscal year might have to be boosted substantially.

Carrier shares had to contend with official figures disclosing a more than seasonal drop in last week's freight loading which tilted the Associated Press index to a new low since 1933.

Business news, on the whole, lacked buoying qualities, with Dun & Bradstreet finding retail sales considerably under those of a year ago, although up slightly from the preceding week. Followers of the motors noted an increase in March automobile sales over February, but for most manufacturers these were less than normally expected. General Motors reported sales to consumers for the last month of 100,022 units against 62,831 in February and 196,095 in March, 1937.

Fall of the Blum cabinet brought the French crisis again to the fore, but it was said to be questionable whether this development had any effect on domestic prices. Foreign securities markets improved. The French franc, after a bad start, rallied in terms of the dollar.

Bonds Generally Higher.

Bonds worked back into recovery stride today following a minor midweek setback. Rails gave the market a spirited leadership by recording gains running from 1 to around 3 points. Utility and industrial loans of speculative rating kept pace with the movement, but some low yield issues tended to soften. United States Government closed 1-32d to 6-32ds lower.

Recovery momentum was aided by a broad upturn in stocks, but it appeared that second grade bonds generally were equally responsive to the inflationary implications read into Washington reports pointing to possible resumption of large Government spending to stimulate business.

Prominence of the rails in the upswing was taken as an indication holders drew some encouragement from the many proposals for carrier aid which came out of Washington rail conferences held this week.

Some of the larger gainers were Southern Pacific 4½s, 1969, at 39¼, up 2¼; Illinois Central 4¾s at 31⅛, up 1⅝; International Telephone 5s at 50, up 2; Western Union 5s, 1960, at 56, up 1¼; Nickel Plate 4½s at 37¾, up 2¾; Southern Railway 4s at 33, up 2½; Allis Chalmers 4s at 101½, up 1½.

Italian loans rose fractions to around 1½ points. Cuban 5½s dipped 2 to 64. Fractional changes were the rule in other foreign groups.

Security Offerings Sink to Low Ebb

New York, April 8 (AP).—New security offerings slumped this week to one of the smallest totals in the current recession, a compilation by Poor's Publishing Co. today indicated. Offerings totaled $4,962,350 against $61,652,500 in the previous week and $16,932,750 in the comparable week a year ago. Most of the new issues this week were municipals, private sales totaling only $675,000.

Wheat Jumps With Big Sales For Overseas

Purchases Estimated at 10 Million Bushels, 2½ Million From U. S.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, April 8.—Excited buying whirled wheat prices skyward 4 cents in Chicago today and nearly 5 cents at Winnipeg. Brisk profit-taking led to moderate setbacks from the day's peaks.

Announcement of sudden huge international purchasing estimated to total more than 10,000,000 bushels preceded the market stampede here. Approximately 2,500,000 bushels of the export takings were from the United States. Australia captured the lion's share.

Fears of sensational frost damage in Texas and elsewhere Southwest appeared largely responsible for the abrupt outburst of European demand. Guesses were that in Texas alone, 1,000,000 to 1,500,000 acres had been exposed to frost injury, with results not immediately determinable. Beneficial heavy snows reported in that region may prove an offset, some trade experts said.

At the close, Chicago wheat futures were 1⅞@2¼ cents above yesterday's finish, May 84⅞@85, July 81⅞@82; corn ½@¾ up; oats ⅝@¾ advanced; rye showing ⅞@2 cents bulge, and provisions unchanged to 5 cents higher.

Deininger Resumes Post As Gen. Baking Chairman

New York, April 8 (AP).—Announcement was made today of the election of William Deininger as chairman of General Baking Co., succeeding Frederick H. Frazier, who will remain as a director. Deininger returns to an office which he held for seven years prior to Frazier's election. He has been associated with General Baking since its formation in 1911.

Mayor Bryce B. Smith of Kansas City was re-elected executive vice president on the condition he be relieved from duties of management of certain plants in the South and Southwest which he previously had superintended. He said he would serve without compensation. Smith said he came to New York to present his resignation as an officer, but the management prevailed upon him to remain with the company. Directors announced a dividend of 10 cents on common stock, payable May 2 to stock of record April 16.

Factory Employment 16½% Under Year Ago

Boston, Mass., April 8.—Employment of union members in the building trades in February dropped 17½ per cent from a year ago. This is in line with general employment conditions for factory employment declined 16½ per cent from a year ago. With the exception of 1937, however, February employment in the building trades was the greatest for any February since 1930.

Curb Advances In All Groups

New York, April 8 (AP).—The curb market shared liberally today in the general advance of securities markets.

Gains of major fractions to 3 points dotted the list and were especially frequent in the so-called "heavy" industrial shares, including Aluminum Co., Pittsburgh Plate Glass, Carrier Corporation, Sherwin Williams and American Cyanamid "B."

Oils and utilities joined the parade but proceeded at a slower pace. Gulf Oil finished 1⅛ higher at 35⅜, American Gas was ¾ higher at 21¾, Electric Bond & Share emerged with a gain of ⅝ at 6¼ and Technicolor finished up ⅞ at 17¼.

Transfers aggregated 128,000 shares, compared with 95,000 the day before.

Lehman Corp. Cuts Holdings of Stocks

New York, April 8 (AP).—Continuing a trend reported in the final quarter of 1937, Lehman Corp., an investment company, sold common stocks on balance during the quarter ended March 31, the corporation's statement disclosed today.

Net asset value as of March 31 was $51,880,316, equal to $24.92 a share of capital stock. This compared with an asset value equal to $29.28 a share on December 31, 1937.

Principally affected by the selling were steel, electrical equipment and oil shares. Total amount sold was 176,500 shares against purchases of 51,900 shares. The corporation also lightened its holdings of railroad bonds.

These and other changes in the portfolio accounted for increased holdings of cash, receivables and U. S. Government securities. These items represented 35.3 per cent of gross assets on March 31 compared with 23.9 per cent on December 31, 1937.

Foreign Markets.

By the Associated Press.

London, April 8.—Industrial securities were in exceptionally large demand at higher prices and those in the tobacco and rubber groups moved upward following strength in both of those commodities. The gilt-edged division and liquor and engineering shares finished higher. Transatlantic stocks remained steady throughout the session and Far Eastern bonds were very firm.

Paris.—Prices moved irregularly in the bourse today with the banking group heavy. Suez Canal advanced 175 francs. Royal Dutch and Bank of France issue was fractionally above Thursday's close, and rentes gained 25 to 45 centimes. Industrials were generally lower.

Liverpool.—Wheat futures advanced sharply on heavy buying by English millers and strength in North American grain markets. Final prices were 2¾d to 3¼d net higher. Cotton futures advanced 3 to 9 points on local buying and a scarcity of contracts. Trade calling absorbed light hedging against outside growths.

Bob Burns Says—

It's a darned poor politician that can't please somebody. I've noticed that when they're runnin' for a second term or for another office they point with pride to some of the wonderful things they've accomplished during their last term.

It reminds me of Aunt Boo braggin' about Uncle Unie. She said "He's the handiest man around the house I ever knew. He took a top off a table, sawed the legs off the washstand and took a panel out of the radio, and made the purttiest footstool I ever saw."

JANE ARDEN To Star or Not to Star By Monte Barrett and Russell Ross

Registered U. S. Patent Office.

IF A LONG DISTANCE CALL COMES THROUGH FOR JANE ARDEN, SHE'S WAITING IN MY OFFICE!
OH, ED IS GRAND, BUT—
THERE CAN ONLY BE ONE ANSWER — HE WON'T STAND IN THE WAY OF YOUR CAREER, WILL HE?
ED!
HELLO, JANE!
I THOUGHT I'D BETTER SEE WHAT THIS WAS ALL ABOUT, SO I CAUGHT THE FIRST PLANE OUT HERE!
I TOLD JANE I WAS SURE YOU WOULDN'T STAND IN HER WAY!
AFTER ALL — I'LL PAY HER MORE IN A MONTH THAN YOU'D PAY HER IN A YEAR!
YES — I'D THOUGHT OF ALL THAT — BUT THE IMPORTANT THING IS — WHAT DOES JANE REALLY WANT TO DO!

Foot-Notes
in Red Cross Shoes
Highlighting Copper Tan, Navy, Patent and Gabardine

Foot-notes that become headlines! The Easter parade of new Red Cross shoes is brim-full of enchantment—featuring the trends that fashion takes to her heart! Copper—because the rich, exciting shade brings color and verve to your costumes! Navy—because it goes beautifully with your pastels, high shades, prints and navy. Patent leather—because it sparkles brightly to the head of the list of favored spring materials! Gabardine—because it's practical as it is smart—and stunning in the new Red Cross styles. Shoes for every occasion from dawn to dusk. And sizes for everyone—3½ to 10, AAAA to C.
